"I DECLINED TO TAKE CASE OF BOND THIEVES"

Ex-Mayor Josiah Quincy of this city who declares he was consulted by Dennett and Douglas of New York, but refused to represent them as counsel.

BANK LOOTERS

LEFT AMONG HIDDEN BONDS

$2500 FOR QUINCY

Placed Money in an Envelope Marked With Name of the Man Whom They Had Consulted Before They Made Big Haul.

The discovery in the room of Oliver M. Dennett, at the Manhattan Club of New York, one of the two men under arrest in connection with the extensive looting of the Trust Company of America, of an envelope containing twenty-five new $100 gold certificates, was responsible for first-bringing the name of former Mayor Josiah Quincy into this mysterious case.

The envelope in which the mony was placed bore this inscription:

"RETAINER FOR JOSIAH QUINCY."

It was found together with several thousand dollars worth of the bonds that had been stolen by W. O. Douglas, the former bond clerk and the other man under arrest.

When seen at his office to-day and asked about the twenty-five gold certificates of $100 each found in Dennett's room, Mr. Quincy said:

"If that is true then it supports what I stated to the papers yesterday that I refused a retainer and refused to take the case. It cannot well be construed any other way. I do not wish to discuss it further, believing that my position was fully covered in the BOSTON AMERICAN yesterday."

DECLINED RETAINER.

Mr. Quincy, in a detailed explanation of his connection with the case, declares that, after interviews with both Dennett and Douglass, and after having learned that a plot was on foot or had been carried out to steal $1,000,000 worth of bonds, he declined to accept a retainer in the case.

He suggested, however, that his brother-in-law, Robertson Honey, sometimes accepted criminal cases. Mr. Honey as a result of this conversation was secured as counsel for the men now in prison.

DETECTIVES SCOUR HUB.

Private detectives from New York have been active in Boston for the past two days seeing if they could unearth anything that would tend to clear up the mystery in the case. It is declared that they are looking for a man whose name has not yet been mentioned in connection with it.

At one of the principal detective agencies in this city to-day, whose men were credited with having been employed on the case, it was denied that they had been engaged to do anything about the matter.

TOLD TRUST CO. HEAD ALL.

According to Mr. Quincy's statements, he last Sunday told a rpresentative of the Trust Company of America, supposed to have ben Oakleigh Thorne, president of the company, all he knew of Dennett's and Douglas's connection with the robbery, and explained to him how he had first been approached by Dennett on the subject of acting as counsel for him and Douglas, of what he had learned from Douglas, and, in fact, gave this representative of the trust company all the information in his possession likely to be of service to the company.

According to Mr. Quincy this meeting with the trust company official took place in New York last Sunday forenoon and, apparently, the information was gratefully received by the official, who was supposed to be fully satisfied with Mr. Quincy's explanation.

Mr. Quincy had two talks with Dennett on Wednesday of last week. He saw him again Saturday morning, last. Mr. Quincy admits that he saw Douglas later that day, where, he will not say, although he admits that he, Douglas and Dennett were together and that he, on that day or night, while refusing a retainer from Dennett and Douglas recommended his brother-in-law, Robertson Honey of Newport and New York, to act as their counsel, and that Mr. Honey accepted.

One of the matters Mr. Quincy declined to elucidate was the exact time at which his brother-in-law, Mr. Honey, became counsel for Dennett and Douglas. Mr. Quincy admitted that he was responsible for his brother-in-law having become their legal representative, and that it was on Saturday afternoon or night, after Douglas had escaped from the trust company offices with the last $50,000 worth of bonds which he took from the loan cage.

When he saw Dennett on Wednesday Dennett started in by telling him that he wanted to consult with him professionally, as he desired to retain him in a case which threatened to be troublesome. Dennett said, according to Quincy, that a friend whom he did not name, but who he described as being an officer of a banking institution in New York, had stolen about $1,000,000 worth of bonds from the institution with which he was connected, and Dennett did not at that time name the Trust Company of America.

Mr. Quincy says that Dennett then told him that this defaulting friend had placed some of the stolen bonds through Dennett, who claimed that he supposed when he began disposing of the bonds that they came from the father-in-law of his unnamed friend. Dennett said he thought

WALL ST. LOSS MADE RAILROAD KING SUICIDE

DAVID WILLCOX, PRESIDENT OF DELAWARE & HUDSON R. R., ENDS LIFE AT SEA.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The disastrous "rich man's panic" of last March, in which many captains of finance dropped millions in stock slumps, is said to have been one cause of the despondency oppressing former President David Willcox of the Delaware & Hudson Railroad, whose suicide on the steamer Barbarossa is being investigated to-day by Health Officer Doty of this port.

Grief for his brother, who died a year ago, and continued ill health, combined with worry over financial losses, drove Mr. Willcox to shoot himself through the head last Wednesday night in his stateroom, as the Barbarossa was returning here from the Mediterranean. It is not known what Mr. Willcox's losses were, but they are believed to have been sufficient to add that fatal "last straw" to the railroad magnate's overwhelming burden of woe.

News of the suicide created a great sensation. It was not known until the Barbarossa reached quarantine at midnight last night, although wireless had flashed the word of his death at sea. Friends here had heard that his health was improving.

Seemed Ill on Voyage.

During the first days of the trip from Europe Mr. Willcox had kept to himself and seemed ill and worried. He was at dinner Wednesday evening and seemed in better spirits. Thursday morning when his stateroom was forced open he was found on the bed, a wound in the temple and a revolver by his side.

Ill health and worries over the railroad management had caused Mr. Willcox to resign the presidency of the Delaware and Hudson early this month by cable.

The directors had planned to make him the road's counsel and he was to have been informed of this on his return to-day.

It was first reported that Mr. Willcox had died of heart-failure, but the true story was given out in the report filed with Health Officer Doty by Captain Langreter of the Barbarossa. The steamer remained at quarantine through the night and steamed up to her dock to-day. Then Dr. Doty prepared to make his official examination into the cause of death.

Friend of Harriman.

David Willcox was one of the foremost figures in railroading, law and finance of this generation. He was an intimate friend of such men as E. H. Harriman and Henry H. Rogers. He was born in Flatbush in 1849. His parents moved to Staten Island when he was two years old. He lived there till 1897, when he took up residence in Manhattan.

He was graduated from Yale in 1872 at the head of his class. After two years at Columbia Law Schol he was admitted to the bar, also into partnership in the famous law firm known as Miller, Peet & Opdyke. Later, former Secretary Bristow of the United States Treasury became a member, the firm becoming Opdyke, Willcox & Bristow.

Prominent in Coal Strike.

In 1895 he became general counsel for the Delaware & Hudson, rising to the presidency in 1903. As counsel for the road he represented the anthracite railroad operators at the federal commission hearings during the big coal strike.

His statements at that time in defence of the operators created much comment. Another famous case of his was when he was counsel for the defence in the Northern Securities suit.

He was a confirmed bachelor and clubman, belonging to several exclusive clubs of this city.

"Breakers" Go Out With Heavy Iron Bars

ARMED MEN ON WAGONS

Imported Drivers, with Bulging Hip Pockets, Keep Their Weapons Handy.

Taking out their teams from the various stables of the master teamsters to-day, imported strike-breakers were at no pains to conceal the fact that they carried weapons of some sort with which to give battle if they thought the situation demanded it. On nearly every wagon, conspicuously placed, was an iron bar two and a half feet long near the driver's seat where it would be handy.

Bystanders loudly commented on the fact that hip pockets bulging outward showed weapons were being carried there. The guards grinned when the charge was brought to their ears.

Prepare Victim for Death.

Michael J. Cunningham, the young teamster shot in the back by an imported strike-breaker while he was endeavoring to prevent trouble, has been unconscious at the City Hospital since midnight. Just before his senses left him the last rites of the church were administered by a priest of the Immaculate Conception Church on Harrison avenue. The boy will not survive the day, the surgeons say.

Joseph Batchelder, James Mulkern and Joseph Deering, arrested in connection with the rioting on A street, South Boston, last night, were in the district court to-day. Batchelder was charged with drunkenness and assault and battery. He paid two fines of $5 and $10. Mulkern, using profane language, appealed from a $5 fine. Deering, charged with disturbing the peace, was fined $10, and appealed.

More Police Ordered Out.

Captain Wescott of the Broadway station will have the largest detail that has yet been on duty surrounding the stables and the freight sheds to-night when the work for the day is over. Only by their strength of numbers do the police feel able to prevent trouble. The situation because of the number of shootings in the district has grown serious.

There were more men on the teams than usual when they were taken out to-day. Orders were issued to the guards by the Master Teamsters: "Do not leave your teams under any circumstances."

Defiantly the strike-breakers faced the crowds who gathered about the stables.

"Boston is the easiest place we have struck yet," cried one of the men. "We haven't been given half the trouble that we have had in other places. We are getting good protection from the police."

Mother Watches Over Boy.

These teams and men were sent out: Flanders & Co., eighteen teams and forty men; Fifield, Richardson & Co., eleven teams and thirty men; J. S. Hilliard & Son, eleven teams an dthirty-eight men; Boston Forwarding & Transfer Company, ten teams and twenty-four men; R. Presbey & Co., three teams and nine men; Johnsen & Co., nine teams and twenty-eight men; F. Knight & Son, three teams and nine men.

All night long Mrs. Cunningham and her daughter, Mary, watched beside the cot of Michael Cunningham, who was shot down by a "breaker." Downstairs the father and another son, Matthew, waited for the word that they had been told to expect any time. In communication with them was Miss Annie Richardson, the dying boy's fiancee. At an early hour today she took Mary's place in the sick room.

Lewis Harris, who is charged with the shooting of Cunningham, is still in the Charles street jail, having been unable to obtain bail.

The scenes on A street, South Boston, exceed anything that has taken place since the beginning of the strike and the importation from New York of strike-breaking teamsters. Innocent workingmen suffered, and young women on their way home from employment were insulted, in many cases by strike-breakers or their guards.

Although Captain Wescott had sixty policemen strung along A street ready to quell disturbances, rioting occurred frequntly, and bricks and tin cans were thrown.

"Breakers" Insult Women.

Vile epithets were flung by strike-breakers at the crowds of home-goers on Summer street bridge and A street. Many young girls were made targets for coarse remarks by men driving teams for the trucking concerns under the union ban. Several working women hurrying to their homes in South Boston were jostled about in the crowds.

Miss Nellie Hughes, twenty-one, who lives at No. 6 Loring street, South Boston, was thrown against a building and so crushed that she collapsed and had to be attended to by friends. The police seemed powerless to prevent the innocent from being made targets for flying stones or blows.

In some instances the police were targets by the strike-breakers, who appeared to think that the police should guard each one of them.

Strikers Blameless.

Union officials declared to-day that none of the striking teamsters were connected in any way with last night's rioting. Orders issued at the beginning of the strike, that all members of the Team Drivers' Union should not congregate where sympathizers were likely to cause trouble, have been faithfully kept, it is asserted.

Daniel J. Tobin, business agent of the union, is indignant that the Employers' Association, through its secretary, Albion P. Pease, should accuse the union teamsters of being mixed up with street riots.

Eleven more strike-breakers deserted last night. They were received at the headquarters of the Teamsters' Union, and their fares paid back to New York. All of the "breakers" campiained of the treatment they have receiveed by the employers' agents.

100 KILLED OR HURT IN COLLAPSE OF PIER

TERRIFIED IMMIGRANTS ON STEAMER AT DOCK JUMP INTO HARBOR.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Nearly one hundred persons are injured or killed by a collapse to-day of a pier at the immigration station at Locust Point, near Baltimore, Md.

So great was the crash of the falling structure that the North German Lloyd steamer Gassel, lying at the immigration pier, 200 feet away, with 1,400 immigrants aboard, rolled and tossed helpless in the waves. Spectators thought an earthquake had come.

Some of the immigrants on board jumped into the water out of sheer terror and were rescued with difficulty. In the immigration station on shore a state of panic reigned for a while, but the officials succeeded in calming the fears of the foreigners without any serious mishap.

The pier that collapsed was in course of construction and was near completion. The pier, which is near the immigration station at Locust Point, was of a mammoth fireproof kind.

HUNGRY "STRIKE=BREAKERS" RIOT ON TRAIN TO BOSTON

Boston American Reporter, Enlisting to Learn Truth, Tells of Wild Trip.

FOLLOWING will be found the second instalment of the illuminating experiences of the BOSTON AMERICAN reporter who went to New York and hired himself to Waddell & Mahon, and came back to Boston as a member of one of their gangs of strike-breakers, in order to give the readers of this paper the inside facts regarding the attempt of the employers to break the teamsters' strike:

By Strike-Breaker 882.

"Where's them sandwiches? Bring on that coffee."

For over fifteen minutes, while the train which was to bear the strike-breaking gang of which I was a member to Boston was waiting at the Grand Central station in New York, this was the constant cry of the hungry strike-breakers, who filled one of the day coaches in the rear of the train.

We had been assured before we left the headquarters of Waddell & Mahon, on Twenty-sixth street, and again in the waiting room of the station, that when we boarded the train we would be served with hot coffee and sandwiches, and the delay in serving this promised lunch was the cause of the outcries.

Just keep quiet for a little while and you'll get it," one of the half-dozen guards cried to allay the shouting, which was momentarily increasing in volume. "Don't make so much noise or you'll be put right." There was no reason to believe that the lunch would not be forthcoming within a short time and the shouting in a measure ceased, though there were mutterings of "Hurry up," or, "We can't wait all night," from some of the more impatient hungry "breakers."

Men Counted Twice.

In the midst of this temporary lull a crowd of eleven strike-breakers from Philadelphia, escorted by several more guards, arrived and entered our car. As they settled down into the few vacant seats I observed that they were much the same type of men as had been recruited at the New York headquarters. All were poorly clad, and only a few had bundles.

When we boarded the train one of the firm's employes had carefully counted the number of men who entered the car, and before the train started another guard came through and as carefully counted the number in the car, both guards getting together on the platform and comparing notes. A moment later the whistle blew and the train started on its journey for Boston.

My companion in the seat was one of the Philadelphia recruits, and early in the journey he showed a disposition to be sociable. He started the conversation by asking if I had the "makin's," meaning the tobacco and paper for the manufacture of a home-made cigarette. I told him that I did not, but that he might have one of my cigarettes, at the same time tendering him the box.

"Do yer mind if me friend has one, too—Bill?" he said, pointing to a short young man seated across the aisle, who had been watching the box with envious eyes. I nodded and both helped themselves.

"Wouldn't Take no Guy's Job."

"Be jingoes, if we didn't have hard luck we wouldn't be here, would we, Bill?" said my companion, at the same time nudging his friend. "Yer see, we come over from Phillie, and we wuz goin' to jump at Jersey City, but de guard was peipin' us and we couldn't shake him." Then he confided to me that he and his friend had been of a party of four which had hired out at Philadelphia, and that two of the crowd had managed to slip the guards at Jersey City and had not come back.

The majority of the Philadelphia crowd, according to my informant, had only hired out as strike-breakers for the purpose of reaching either New York or Boston, and proposed to quit as soon as they reached their destination. "I wouldn't take no guy's bread and butter; not on yer life," he said, in explanation of his determination to jump when they reached Boston.

After the train had pulled out from One Hundred and Twenty-fifth street there again began to be a concerted cry for the coffee and sandwiches. "Wait till we get to the next station; they're getting it ready," one of the guards said; but the promise was not taken as seriously as the former ones, and there was hooting and curses.

Many of the crowd had gone all day without eating, and McLaughlin, my companion from Philadelphia, said that he had had nothing but a cinnamon bun since 7 o'clock the night before. When we reached South Norwalk the crowd watched the door expectantly, but their hopes were shattered when, after a moment's stop the train started again without any sign of the coffee and sandwiches.

Tried to Start Riot.

At the rear end of the train one of the strike-breakers, well under the influence of liquor, got up in his seat and shouted: "How long are you guys goin' to stand for hot air like that. Come on, make 'em give up." Some cried, "Your're right Bill," but the majority cried derisively: "Sit down, before we knock you down. Yer can't get nothin' that way." When he saw that his argument was futile, he slunk into his seat and said no more.

All this time the guards had been passing through the car, taking the names and numbers of the "breakers" and assuring each individually that the lunch would soon be brought around.

When we reached New Haven there was more shouting, and some who had become badly intoxicated became quite abusive and insulting to the guards in their demands. A number attempted to leave the train at this station, but the guards blocked the doors and refused to let them pass.

But it remained for the conductor of the train to start a disturbance that brought all of the guards on the run to the centre of the car, and threatened for a time to involve all in a wild riot. Just before the train reached New Haven the conductor passed through the car, and whether at the instigation of the guards or otherwise, he locked the doors at either end of the car.

Found Doors Locked.

A sandwich boy was the immediate cause of the disturbance. He came to the door of the car shouting his wares just as we pulled into New London. I gave McLaughlin money to buy sandwiches for himself, his friend and myself. As the door was locked he let down one of the window panes and the food was handed through. It was then that the badly intoxicated individual who had delivered the outburst about "hot air" discovered that the door was locked.

Standing in the centre of the aisle he shouted: "Are you goin' to stand for that, boys. Make 'em open that door." Another breaker, who had hitherto remained quiet, jumped up and took a hand in the argument. "We ain't no prisoners. We're free-born American citizens. They ain't got no right to lock us in here and if they don't open that door quick, I'll smash it in."

Everybody was on his feet in a moment. There was a rush for the centre of the car, and the guards, who had been at either end, jumped into the fray.

Started to Smash Door.

"Don't you smash anything. I'll have you prosecuted when we get to Boston," said the leader of the Waddell and Mahon forces, a tall, good-looking fellow, addressing himself to the author of this latter impassioned speech. But his words lacked the force of conviction and his forensic effort was greeted with hoots and catcalls.

"Come on, boys, smash in that door. What do we care about these people; they're a pack of stiffs," cried the ringleader of the breakers and the instigator of the trouble. He started for the door and a number started to follow his lead, when one of the subordinate employes of Waddell and Mahon came to the rescue.

Standing on one of the seats, he shouted loudly: "Wait a minute, boys. Listen to me." They were uttered in a clear, forceful tone and the rush for the door was temporarily halted. "This company I represent is going to use you boys on the level. I have been out with sixty-four strike-breaking gangs and this is the first crowd that I ever saw that acted like this. It isn't right. It isn't fair. You will get used all right when you get to Boston. Just keep cool."

"That's all right, but it ain't feedin' us, and we want that door open," came back the answer from a dozen throats. Other guards had succeeded in pushing the two intoxicated ringleaders into seats and without a leader the gang was disposed to listen to an argument. The excitement was largely quelled when the conductor appeared on the platform and unlocked the front door.

Half a Dozen Escaped.

He passed into the car and it is safe to say that for the next five minutes the conductor spent one of the most unhappy periods of his life. One of the gang grabbed him roughly by the arm and said: "By what authority do you lock the doors of these cars. The company ain't got no right to lock us in and you know it."

The conductor tried to argue, but the "breakers" had right on their side and were not displayed by flimsey excuses. Several of the guests succeeded in making a path for him to the rear door and after he made his escape from the car we did not see him again until the train reached Boston.

While this excitement was going on, a half dozen of the crowd saw an opportunity to escape and quickly grasped it. The guards were all in the centre of the car and both toilet rooms were left unguarded. As the train was just pulling out of New London, after the disturbance had been quieted, one of the guards peered into the toilet room just in time to see the head and shoulders of the last deserter disappearing out of the window.

We now began to realize for the first time that Waddell and Mahon were not prepared to make good on the coffee and sandwich proposition, and the crowd began to seriously question whether or not we would get the "piping hot dinner" that had been promised when we got to Boston. The excitement and the fatigue of the journey were gradually producing their effect, and by the time that the train drew into Providence many were fast asleep.

Came Back with Whiskey.

The disturbing element was awake, however, and the hero of the door battle found time to get off, returning in a few moments flourishing a flask of whiskey. "I got mine. I don't want none of them coffee and sandwiches," he said, as he retired to his seat, followed by a number of his cronies. The flask was soon emptied.

It was nearly midnight when we finally pulled into the big South Station. Captain Bradley, the local leader of Waddell & Mahon, was on hand at the station with a number of guards to meet the train. With firm and stern features, he seemed the only one of the firm's employes that appeared capable of command, with the exception of the younger guard who had quelled the trouble on the train.

Forming into couples on the station platform, we took up the march for the floating fortress Zealandia, anchored off Congress street, and the "piping hot dinner" we had been looking forward to with such relish.

One Building Sent Skyward, Thirty-five Shattered by Nitrate Blast.

SEVERAL TOWNS SHAKEN

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Two men were killed and an immense amount of property destroyed to-day by a terrific explosion in the works of Lazin & Rand Powder Company at Haskell, N. J., between Paterson and and Pompton lakes.

The explosion occurred in the nitrate building, which was completely destroyed. Thirty-five other buildings in the big plant were shattered by the terrible shock and the entire town of Haskell and the surrounding country was shaken as if by an earthquake.

The explosion occurred soon after the day shift had gone to work. The two men killed were in the nitrate building. A number of other workmen in the vicinity of that building were stunned and slightly hurt, but none seriously.

The nitrate building was blown into the air. Nothing was left but fragments.

Every window in the other buildings was blown in. Some of the buildings were so badly shaken that they will have to be repaired before they can be used again.

Buildings on the Pompton Lakes were shaken and the vibrations reached to the outskirts of Paterson. Residents of Haskell feared at first that the entire plant had been destroyed and there was tremendous excitement in the town.

There was so little of the nitrate building left after the explosion that danger from fire was minimized. The slight blaze which followed the explosion was soon extinguished by the employed of the plant.

JAIL WOMAN TWICE SAVED BY BOY HERO

Joseph Reardon, a sixteen-year-old Brookline schoolboy, dove into Leverett pond in the Brookline parkway yesterday and rescued Mrs. Mary Curran of No. 90 Pearl street, Brookline, proving himself a hero. The woman was hailed to court to-day and given six months in the House of Correction for drunkenness.

In court Mrs. Curran's twenty-four-year-old daughter Mary, well dressed and presenting a good appearance, turned spectators to tears in her endeavor to have her mother turn over a new leaf.

It was only after great difficulty that young Reardon succeeded in bringing the insensible body of the woman to shore, where she was revived by Patrolman Holloran.

This is the second time that young Reardon has rescued Mrs. Curran. During a heavy snowstorm last Winter he found her lying in the snow, near death from freezing, and carried her into a house, where it took the efforts of a physician to save her life.

$2,500 IN ENVELOPE LEFT FOR QUINCY

at first that it was all right, as he understood the friend's father-in-law was worth Quincy's story, told him that his friend was still connected with the banking institution which he had been looting, and that there was no danger of detection before May 1. Dennett said that he desired to retain Mr. Quincy as counsel for his friend and wanted him to also look out for his own interests in the matter, and offered Quincy a retainer on the spot, which was declined.

URGED TO ACCEPT CASE.

Wednesday night Mr. Quincy returned to Boston and remained here until 1 o'clock Friday afternoon. Leaving here at that time he arrived in New York about 6 o'clock Friday night. It was during Friday, according to all accounts, while Mr. Quincy was either in Boston or on his way back to New York, that Douglas made his biggest haul from the trust company, removing from it on that day bonds to the value of $400,000.

Mr. Quincy says that at 10:15 o'clock Saturday morning, a week ago to-day, he met Dennett at the place agreed upon, and at that time Dennett told him the name of the trust company from which the bonds had been stolen. That was the first time, according to Quincy, that he knew the name of the looted institution.

Dennett was considerably excited Saturday morning, for he said that exposure was imminent, as auditors had been put at work on the books of the Trust Company of America the previous night. He didn't tell Quincy of the $400,000 theft of the previous day, but he said that Oakleigh Thorne, president of the Trust Company, who had been in the country, was probably coming right back to New York, and that the discovery of the large theft was at hand.

Mr. Quincy would not discuss that meeting with Dennett further than to say that during their interview Dennett urged him to become counsel for himself and his friend and that he urged upon Mr. Quincy a large retainer in bills and urged them upon him persistently. Mr. Quincy said that he declined to accept the money, but made an appointment to meet Dennett up town later in the day. It was then he finally declined to accept the case and recommended his brother-in-law.

Planned to Get $500,000 More.

Dispatches from New York to-day reveal in detail for the first time the history of the operation and the detection of the great bond fraud.

It was learned that during the twelve months previous to Friday W. O. Douglass had stolen in odd lots in all about $50,000 of securities. The total of his stealings, according to the information given the State Banking Department, was $500,000.

It is believed that when he went back to the Trust Company on Saturday he had planned to get about $500,000 more of securities and raise the total of his stealings to practically $1,000,000. With about $900,000 of the company's bonds in his possession, or that of his alleged confederate, Oliver M. Dennett, Douglass, it is alleged, expected that President Thorne would be willing to pledge the company not to prosecute him or Dennett for the smaller stealings in exchange for the return of the $900,000 of bonds.

Converted Into Cash.

The $400,000 of bonds which Douglass stole Friday, it is believed, were turned over to Dennett at once and by him hypothecated with various brokerage houses and other financial institutions. It was in this way that the bulk of the $140,000 was borrowed.

Dennett or Douglass, it is believed, converted these large loans into cash on Saturday, but what has become of the money neither the trust company, the Pinkertons, the police nor the District Attorney's office has been able to discover.

It is believed that the money has been hidden and that Douglass still hopes to effect a compromise in the criminal action against him before returning it.

A hunt for the money has been in progress ever since his arrest on Sunday.

The District Attorney was not called into the case until Tuesday night. Between Sunday and Tuesday night it is understood that the trust company tried through the Pinkertons, to trace the money, recover it and clean up the whole matter. All that they were able to do was to recover some of the bonds by the payment of $77,000, the amount borrowed on them, and locate the remainder of the bonds on which various brokers had loaned $63,000.

To Prosecute to Limit.

As the bonds against which the $63,000 were loaned are in the hands of high-class stock exchange firms, whose members are personally known to the directors and officers of the trust company, there will be no move on the part of the latter to take physical possession of the securities until it has been judicially determined whether the company or the lenders shall stand the $63,000 loss.

If the money which was borrowed can be recovered there will be no litigation between the trust company and the concerns with which stolen securities were hypothecated.

No matter what restitution is made by either Douglass or Dennett, this will not interfer with the plan of the District Attorney to prosecute them vigorously.

After a long conference which President Thorne of the trust company had with Douglass and the District Attorney yesterday, he was asked:

Total Thefts of $500,000.

"Are you going to let up on the prosecution?"

"No; that is all in the hands of the district attorney, and he is going right ahead with it," said Mr. Thorne.

The president of the trust company did not deny that the total of Douglass's thefts of securities was approximately $500,000. He said he did not know the exact figures, but was interested only in the net results, which at the very worst would not involve a greater loss to the company than $140,000.

Detailed statements were obtained by the District Attorney yesterday from both Dennett and Douglass.

ARCHBISHOP WILLIAMS 85 YEARS TO-DAY

Venerable Prelate Passes the Day Quietly and Receives Many Congratulations.

IS IN PERFECT HEALTH

Archbishop John J. Williams, dean of the Catholic church in the United States, and the head of the New England archdiocese, is eighty-five years old to-day. Shunning ostentation of any sort, the venerable prelate spent the day quietly at the archiepiscopal residence in Union Park street. He rose at 6:30 o'clock and at 7 o'clock celebrated low mass in the house chapel.

Because of his advanced age, the usual public mass in the Chapel of the Blessed Sacrament was not said. The chapel, however, was crowded with persons who anticipated a public mass by His Grace. The altar in the little house chapel was covered with flowers sent by admiring friends.

Following the mass the prelate breakfasted with the clergy of the Cathedral. The first one to greet him was his private secretary, the Rev. Dr. Francis X. Dolan. The other priests of the house extended their felicitations in turn.

With the first morning mail at 8 o'clock letters and packages of flowers began to arrive. At 9 o'clock a congratulatory telegram was received from Bishop Bernard McQuade of Buffalo, N. Y., with whom the archbishop spends his vacation each Summer.

During the morning about fifty of the older clergy of the diocese called at the Union Park street residence to offer their respects. The archbishop talked with each of them for a few minutes. Many of the older residents of the Cathedral parish, old intimate friends of the archbishop, also called.

The venerable prelate, despite his advanced age, is in perfect health. According to his physician, Dr. John G. Blake, he has never been in better physical condition than he is to-day. The operations for cataracts two years ago on both eyes completely restored his sight, but by order of Dr. Hasket Derby, the specialist who performed the operations, he does little reading. Her personal mail and the newspapers are read to him by Father Dolan. The archdiocesan affairs are handled, under his direction, by the Rev. Thomas McCormack and the Rev. Dr. Michael J. Splaine.

Emma Eames, Freed by Divorce, to Marry 'Love-Song' Baritone

GREAT PRIMA DONNA, IT IS SAID, WILL SOON TAKE ANOTHER HUSBAND.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Mme. Emma Eames, the famous prima donna, is free. She has won her divorce suit, brought against Julian Story, the artist, according to reports made of the secret hearing before Referee Frank M. Buck at White Plains yesterday. The action was brought in the Supreme Court of Westchester County.

Every effort has been made by attorneys on both sides to keep the proceedings from the public, but it is known that the testimony covered sixty typewritten pages. Mr. Story was represented by counsel, but it is not stated that he contested the suit.

Ask Papers Sealed.

It is said that the lawyers will ask the Court to have the papers in the case sealed, so that not even the county clerk will see their contents. The only remaining step to be taken will be for her attorneys to apply to the court for a confirmation of the referee's report granting the divorce, which legal formality will make the legal separation absolute.

Mme. Eames, so her friends in musical circles in this city believe, is to marry a singer, a well-known baritone, whose forte is the singing of love songs, and whose dramatic and emotional work on the stage is said to have made a profound impression on the prima donna.

Thus ends the romantic union of Julian Story and Emma Eames—a love match wrecked on the rocks of incompatibility and clashing "artistic temperaments." While these causes had been drawing them apart for some time, it was the dramatic incident of the masked ball at Philadelphia a year or so ago, when the beautiful singer, in a domino and mask, overheard two other masked guests' conversation, which precipitated the final quarrel.

While Mme. Eames was appearing at the Metropolitan Opera House, early in 1906, her husband, who had come to this country with her after their vacation at his villa in Italy, was painting the portraits of wealthy women in Philadelphia, where he was lionized by society.

Climax at a Masked Ball.

To repay his social obligations Mr. Story gave a large bal masque at the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel. It so happened that Mme. Eames was cast by a sudden change in program for the principal role in an opera at the Metropolitan on the night of the masked ball in Philadelphia, and it was then too late for Mr. Story to recall the invitations.

On the night of the ball Mme. Eames received a telegram during the performance that her husband had been stricken with a sudden but not dangerous illness, and asking her to go to Philadelphia at once to act as hostess for his guests.

A special train was ordered, and the performance was hurried through for Mme. Eames's sake. As quickly as the curtain fell she ran to a cab without waiting to change her stage costume, and was whisked in fast time by the special train.

Poured Gossip in Her Ear.

The jollity was at its height when Mme. Eames entered, and she was greeted by two masked women who thought they recognized her. Mme. Eames humored them in their mistake, but they soon plunged into gossip which silenced her. They were wondering what costume a beautiful debutante of that season was wearing, and whether she would appear as Juliet, and Mr. Story as Romeo, and what Mme. Eames would think of it if she knew the devoted attention her husband was paying to the young woman, and how her tender feelings were reciprocated.

Every word that fell from the lips of the two masked women was like a poisoned dart to Mme. Eames, but she did not reveal her feelings, and listened until she had heard as much as she could hear, and then slipped away. The two masked women did not lose sight of her and when the hour for unmasking struck and Mme. Eames stood revealed, they suddenly found that the ball had no enjoyment for them and left. Mme. Eames after the last guest had gone went to her husband's apartments and demanded an explanation.

One Clash Ended Happiness.

The one clash shattered all their years of happy life together, and they separated then, and have not met since.

Mme. Eames has many characteristics of the high-strung, nervous temperament often attributed to women artists.

Next to her art it is said that the dearest thing in the world to her is her Dachshund, "Herr Fritz." This liver-colored, elongated animal is the constant companion of the soprano. Even if she steps from one room of her apartments to another, "Herr Fritz" accompanies her.

Mme. Eames can not rest in the darkened room after lunch each day if she can hear a clock or watch ticking. There must be absolute quiet—except for the breathing of "Her Fritz"—and she cannot rest until she hears his breathing.

Dog Lives Like a King.

This dog lives like a king. He has a couch of the softest down, and many a maid has been discharged for failing to see that "Herr Fritz's" blankets were properly adjusted throughout the night.

Mme. Eames has had many conflicts with other stars and with managers. Only two years ago she slapped the face of Mme. Senger-Battaque on the Metropolitan Opera House stage. They were singing in "Lohengrin" and Mme. Eames believed that Mme. Senger-Battaque should have left the stage before she did, instead of remaining to receive the plaudits of the great audience. For that offence Mme. Eames was fined $100 and forced by the management to openly apologize to the offended singer. The fine was remitted.

Mr. Story is at present in Philadelphia and Mme. Eames is in Chicago.

RULES OBSERVED BY EMMA EAMES

When Mme. Eames was in love with her husband she gave out the following precepts, which she said she observed daily:

"I write to my husband every day. That I do, no matter what happens.

"I have learned to control my nerves perfectly. I so control my mind that I enjoy the present. I never strain myself with the expectation of being happier.

"For an hour after luncheon I lie still, flat on my back, in a darkened room. If I am going to sing that afternoon, I lie still for two hours. There must be absolute quiet. In this darkened room I empty my brain. I think of nothing. I permit nothing to worry or vex me. That is self-control.

"I never eat dinner on the night I am to sing, and maybe not the evening before. If I ate dinner I could not sing. My body is an instrument, and when it is not in perfect condition I can do nothing.

"I live for my work and have learned how to keep myself feeling at the best. My work is above everything."

EMMA EAMES, WHO WINS DIVORCE SUIT

The famous prima donna has been victorious in her action for freedom against Julian Story, her artist husband, because of a discovery she made at a masked ball given at the Bellevue-Stratford in Philadelphia.

Women Win Battle to Wear Picture Hats in a Church

SOLIDLY VOTE AGAINST THE MEN FOR THE PRIVILEGE IN LYNN.

LYNN, April 27.—That the women of one Lynn church at least are determined to cling to the old time privilege of wearing huge feather and ribbon bedecked creations with which to obstruct the sight of the minister in his pulpit, and cause envy in the hearts of their neighbors, was shown at the annual meeting of the Washington Street Baptist Society, when sixty-two women arose in their might to express their opinions in a most decisive manner and put the curb on the rule for the removal of hats, now in strict vogue at theatres and other places of amusement.

Some member of the male contingent of the church society, more brave than his fellow men, but timid enough to conceal his identity under the pseudonym "Pro Bono Publico," atempted to secure the adoption of a recommendation making it compulsory for ladies to remove their headgear during services at the house of worship.

The effort to railroad the proposition was brought to an abrupt halt, when the "sixty-two" became cognizant of what was occurring, and, in unison they arose in opposition. "Pro Bono Publico" is something of an artist in the literary line, for in a report read by Moderator Frank W. Padelford, pastor of the church, the unknown stated that he objected to "rows of hats, which no one could see over or around."

Continuing, he said: "Much more interest would be taken in the sermons if the great masses of straw, felt, birds, braid, feathers, flowers, grapes, ribbons, lace, grass and other great messes of dry goods that compose the modern hat were removed from sight." It was suggested in the letter that hooks for the creations of the milliner be placed under the seats or on the back of the pew.

"Pro Bono" probably meant what he wrote, but the ladies would be delighted to learn his identity. After the letter was read, a motion to accept the recommendation was voted upon and on a hand vote Moderator Padelford declared it adopted. But one woman, who suddenly realized the import of the action, announced that she doubted the count and called for a raising vote.

Women Vote in Solid Phalanx.

Then in one phalanx sixty-two women, all who possessed the right to vote, stood up and were counted. When the supporters of the movement were asked to make themselves known, thirty-seven noses were counted.

"It is not a vote," said the Moderator, but the victorious women didn't even utter a cheer. Whether or not the action was taken in the nature of a joke has not been learned, but for a few minutes the female parishioners were red hot at what they termed impudence of their fellow churchmen.

PLAN AIR RIDE FROM ST. LOUIS TO WASHINGTON

Signal Corps and Aero Club Members Start Long Distance Balloon Tests.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

ST. LOUIS, April 27.—The first long distance balloon ascension test which Captain Charles De F. Chandler, United States Signal Corps, and J. C. McCoy, of the Aero Club of New York, are to conduct, are undertaken here to-day. The objective point will be Washington, and the trip is taken in order to determine the efficiency of the balloons as signal agencies in warfare.

A novel feature in balloon construction will be introduced. Mr. McCoy has fitted up his balloon, the "America," with sleeping quarters in the shape of a bunk in the hanging basket.

The aeronauts expect to make no descents, but to land in Washington on Monday. The balloon has a capacity of about 80,000 cubic feet of gas, the standard of balloons of the aero clubs of the world.

The record for the longest distance in America was made in 1859 by Professor Wise, who started from St. Louis and landed near the eastern end of Lake Ontario.

Another ascension planned is that of Alain R. Hawley, the New York broker, in the Orient, accompanied by Leo Stevens of New York.

Mr. McCoy will try for the Lahm Cup in addition to making the test for the signal corps. Mr. Hawley will make one of the ten ascensions to obtain a pilot's license from the Aero Club of America. The Lahm Cup is offered by the Aero Club to any member of the club or an affiliated organization who will exceed the 402-mile record made by Captain Frank Lahm in winning the International races at Paris last year.

TOLD FORMER N. H. SENATOR OF SUICIDE SEVEN

Hammond Set Date of His Own Death, but Killed Himself Months Earlier.

MANCHESTER, N. H., April 27.—Confirmation of the theory that Charles F. Hammond of Lawrence, Mass., who shot himself a few days ago, was a member of a suicide club, was had by the statement of former State Senator Joseph Chatel yesterday.

"Hammond was in my place of business last November," said Mr. Chatel, "and told me that he was a member of a suicide club in Boston, composed of seven men. He went on to say that he had nothing to live for, and would just as soon die as not.

"Then he asked me if I had noticed reports in the papers of the suicide of an elderly man in a Boston hotel a short time before. I said that I remembered seeing the acounts, and Hammond said this man was another member of the club.

"Besides himself, he said, one other member remained and he was a man seventy-three years of age.

"Hammond told me that he himself had been slated to go September 27, 1907, but evidently he changed his mind and did the thing sooner."

Chatel was not surprised to read of Hammond's death.

IN DEATH FEAR JOHN D. DEEDS SON OHIO LAND

Mostly Unimproved Property Around Cleveland Comprises Holdings Transferred.

CLEVELAND, April 27.—In view of his advancing age and to prepare for death, John D. Rockefeller, the oil king, has transferred property, mostly unimproved, scattered over and around Cleveland to the value of between half and three-quarters of a million dollars, to his son, John D. Rockefeller, Jr. The deeds were signed in New York by Mr. Rockefeller and his wife, Mrs. Laura S. Rockefeller, and were filed late yesterday in the county recorder's office in Cleveland.

The deeds number fifteen in all, each for the nominal consideration of $10. Hundreds of vacant lots in Cleveland, East Cleveland and near the Cleveland State Hospital for the Insane, some of which land was bought in 1872 and included hundreds of acres, were conveyed by deeds.

Forest Hill, the Rockfeller skyscraper, and the Rockefeller home on Euclid avenue and East Fortieth street are not included in the transfer.

CHICAGO, April 27.—A gift of land worth $2,000,000 from John D. Rockefeller to the University of Chicago has been announced by the university authorities.

The latest donation from the university founder includes the entire frontage of the south side of the Midway Plaisance from Cottage Grove to Madison avenue, and will make possible the completion of the original building plans of President Harper.

The gift Mr. Rockefeller has made the university increases the total amount he has given to the school in the last sixteen months to $6,367,000.

FINE PICTURES BURN; LOSS OVER $100,000

MONTREAL, April 27.—By the burning of the residence of J. N. Greenshields, criminal lawyer, yesterday, damage to more than $100,000 on account of the magnificent picture gallery was inflicted. A female servant jumped out of a third-story window and may die.

J. DE FOREST DANIELSON IS DYING; PARESIS

Boston Clubman Beyond Doctor's Aid in Providence Insane Asylum.

J. DeForest Danielson, of Boston, Providence and Newport, is dying of paresis in a Providence, R. I., sanitarium. The doctors who are treating him declare to-day that he cannot live a week.

Mr. Danielson was stricken several weeks ago and was taken to Butler's Asylum for the Insane for treatment. It was at first hoped that he would recover, but he rapidly grew worse and he has now collapsed entirely, mentally and physically.

Mr. Danielson is one of the best known clubmen, automobilist, golfer and sportsmen in this city and Rhode Island. His wife, who was Mrs. William Otis, when she married Mr. Danielson, and whose maiden name was Miss Pauline Root, is a leader in society, here and in Newport, and is noted as a clever horsewoman. She ranked with the smartest entertainers in the Newport cottage colony, and has been a successful exhibitor at horse shows, frequently winning blue ribbons.

The Danielsons' wide circle of friends, here, in New York and in Rhode Island are shocked by the news of his collapse, which was kept secret while hope of recovery remained.

Among the Boston clubs of which he is a member are the Somerset and Puritan. In Rhode Island he belonged to the Hope, Agawam and Squantum clubs of Providence. He was also a member of the New York Yacht Club and other metropolitan organizations.

The Boston residence of the Danielsons is at No. 4 Commonwealth avenue.

MORGAN PLANS A $2,500 BOOK

LONDON, April 27.—J. Pierpont Morgan is preparing under the direction of W. Williamson, the noted English authority, one of the most sumptuous and costly volumes ever published. It will contain reproductions in color of Mr. Morgan's unrivalled collection of miniatures.

Forty copies of this superb book will cost $2,500 each and forty more $1,250 each—$150,000 in all. Mr. Morgan intends to give a copy to those of his friends who love miniatures better than the engravings done by bank note companies, and also to a few favored rival collectors and public art galleries. It is probable that an edition less limited in number will be reproduced at $50 a copy.

Not Necessary to Reply to Calumny, Declares Mrs. Eddy

SIBYL WILBUR VISITS CHRISTIAN SCIENCE LEADER—FINDS HER WELL, HAPPY, SERENE.

That Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy is "well, sane, happy and serene" is declared to be the belief of Sibyl Wilbur, who visited her at Pleasant View on Good Friday last and whose impressions of the call are printed in the May number of "Human Life," which has just been published.

In describing that interview Miss Wilbur writes:

"It was the writer's good fortune to be received for a personal interview by Mary Baker Eddy on Good Friday in the study at Pleasant View. It is difficult to realize, standing face to face with this venerable woman, who radiates love like a benedicite, whose glance is as serene as the blue sky and whose smile is reassuring as the sun on a Spring day, that there exists a false picture of her in the minds of any, a picture of senility, fear and suspicion.

"Mrs. Eddy, as I saw her within a few days, was in good health, alert mentally, cheerful and engaging. She spoke briefly to me on spiritual matters and dismissed me with an affectionate embrace. We stood together, her hand resting on my shoulder, in the bay window overlooking the valley, beyond the broad sweep of which lies that charming spot, her birthplace—and she was wrapped in and radiated a serenity corresponding to the glorious vista.

Received by Mrs. Sargeant.

"On Good Friday the sun drenched New England with the warmth and glory of May-time. The robins were singing, the Merrimac River shone like burnished silver, spotted here and there with ice cakes that resembled white swans from the distance. The hills were blue in a tender amethystine light, a soft green of new grass was visible in the lawns of Pleasant View.

"I went out to Mrs. Eddy's home in the morning and was received by Mrs. Laura Sargeant, who has resided for so many years in this house as companion to the founder of Christian Science. Mrs. Sargeant conducted me to the library and there I met Mr. George Kinter, a stalwart, broad-shouldered man with kind brown eyes and hearty manner. He was visiting at the house, resuming for a short time old relations there. Mr. Kinter was some years ago assistant secretary to Mrs. Eddy, a position now occupied by Mr. H. Cornell Wilson, of New York, Mr. Lewis Strang having but recently ended a year's service. While I was talking with Mr. Kinter, Mrs. Sargeant was summoned by Mrs. Eddy's bell, and we were presently requested to adjourn to an office off the dining-room, as Mrs. Eddy wished to use the library for some research she was making.

"In the office Mr. Calvin A. Frye and Mr. Wilson joined us. I asked that Mrs. Eddy be told I was there and that I would esteem it a favor to have a personal interview. The secretaries were doubtful that this would be granted.

"Leaving my request with these gentlemen to be presented to Mrs. Eddy I went for a drive up the valley to Bow, Mrs. Eddy's birthplace, and after visiting the old pink farmhouse, with its porticoes in Colonial style, its green blinds, its worn doorstep, and peeping in at the empty house with their old-fashioned fireplaces, where the hospitality of days gone by had been dispensed, I returned to the hotel for dinner and then drove again to Pleasant View.

"Not Necessary to Reply."

"Mr. Kinter had presented my request and had to tell me that Mrs. Eddy had asked that her kind remembrance be given me, but that she wished to be excused from discussing matters which I had in hand. She had told them to answer certain of my questions.

"While I was talking with Mr. Kinter in the afternoon, Mrs. Eddy's bell again rang and she sent to me to say she had decided not to leave me without a few words of personal conversation. I went up stairs to her private study and was admitted alone to speak with her. Mrs. Eddy sat at her desk as usual, wearing a black silk gown and a bit of rare lace at her throat. She was looking down as I entered, wrapt in thought. But presently she looked up and rose and came to me with a quick, elastic step. She took me by the arm and after studying my face for a minute, smiled and lead me to the window.

"'Don't you know, my child, that it is not necessary to reply to calumny?' she asked. 'I have had a great deal of this to bear with for many years and I no longer think it wise to answer unjust aspersions. But I appreciate what you are trying to do. I will not talk about these matters, however; my Father has led me step by step through a long life. He is still leading me, and I go forward trusting, confident in the outcome, absolutely sure that the world will eventually do me justice.'

No Wavering in Her Gaze.

"Mrs. Eddy then laid her hands on both my shoulders and looked long and earnestly at me, enveloping me with the blue of her eyes, as the blue of the skies enveloped the hills. There was no wavering in that gaze. The light of her soul shone through them. She was like a saint in dignity and a seer in character. I can do no more than affirm with earnest conviction that this woman is well, sane, happy and serene."

Additional details of the separation of Mrs. Eddy from Dr. Patterson are given by Miss Wilbur, who writes:

"Shortly after his wife's recovery Dr. Patterson left Lynn mysteriously, deserting her. No one knew where he went at the time, but later he practiced dentistry in Littleton, N. H. Mrs. Patterson's remarkable experience had centered her attention again on the philosophy of religion. Dr. Patterson's response to her unworldliness was entirely worldly—he eloped with the wife of a wealthy man. Some time afterwards the partner in his adventure came to the house where Mrs. Patterson was living and asked to see her. Mrs. Patterson received her, much to her hostess' astonishment, who had described the caller as 'that woman.'

Was a Peacemaker.

"The repentant woman told Mrs. Patterson that the doctor had talked so much of his wife's spirituality that she had dared to come to her and ask that she make intervention for her with her husband. Mrs. Patterson did this and succeeded in bringing about a complete reconciliation. This was the second time in her life that she performed this office of peacemaker for a woman who had been party to the desecration of her home.

"Dr. Patterson then came himself to see his wife. She was staying at the time with very dear friends, an elderly Quaker couple, and the man of the house, answering the ring of the doorbell, lifted his cane when he saw who the caller was. Mrs. Patterson was in the hall and intervened. 'Let him come in,' she said. Dr. Patterson entered and Mrs. Patterson, putting on her hat, prepared to depart. 'Are you going away?' asked the doctor, in surprise. 'Yes,' she said. 'You and I must not remain under the same roof.' He then told her she need not go, that he would not drive her out, but would himself go away.

TWO OF WORLD'S RICHEST HEIRESSES

These little girls are the daughters of Lady Cooper, sister of the late James Henry ("Silent") Smith, who is left $20,000,000 in the will drawn by the multi-millionaire in London.

LEMON CLUB! ARE YOU ONE? SEE DOONAN

None-Worthier-Than-Whom F. DeSales of Old Family Is Out for Members.

MOTTO: 'WHAT'S THE USE?'

Watch out for Doonan.

Else he will initiate you into the Lemon Club.

His full name, delivered securely wrapped f. o. b., is F. DeSales Doonan, than whom no worthier member ever graced the grand old name of Doonan. He is associate editor of the Boot & Shoe Recorder, a publication not to be confounded, on your life, with the Shoe & Leather Reporter.

Doonan was the last man handed this lemon and he is still running with it. It started with Frank McMenimen, who lives in Cambridge and is therefore used to the academic atmosphere of higher thought.

McMenimen is a pressman for the B. & S. (Boot and Shoe Recorder, not Brandy & Soda). For the fun of it he set up a card reading:

MEMBERSHIP CARD
Lemon Club.
(Squeeze, Brother Squeeze.)

He ran off a few on the press.

"Them's fine," says McMenimen, and he called to Superintendent Lewis J. Hewitt.

Superintendent "Stung."

"Hey, Lew, got fifteen cents?"

Hewitt dug.

"You're elected," says McMenimen, pocketing the fifteen and handing Hewitt a bunch of cards.

"Huh!" says Hewitt, "I'm a lemon." Then he went gunning for a new sucker. In came F. DeSales Doonan.

"I might as well make a cigar outer this," says Hewitt, so he braced F. DeSales Doonan for a quarter. F. DeS. D. produced. Then Hewitt took the quarter and handed over the cards.

The none-worthier-than-whom Doonan pays rent at the Mountfort, which holds down a choice piece of land at the corner of Mountfort and Beacon streets, where the Boston & Albany express goes by daily faster than a walk.

Rules of Famous Club.

Millionaires and near-millionaires out Beacon street way have been handed so many lemons of late to a citrous copper market that it is doubtful if Doonan gets any new members out in his bailiwick, but he is busy on the job, just the same. Here are the principal rules of the Lemon Club:

"In greeting a brother member say 'Stung.'

"Membership shall be open to the following:

Commuters along the Boston & Albany.
Men who picked the wrong horse.
Rooseveltian liars.
And all others who can show probable cause.

"The club motto shall be 'What's the use?'

"No member shall give a fellow-member the double cross. This is not a suicide club.

"The annual meeting takes place on April 1, annually."

'GOLDIE' NEIL SURE SHE WILL BE ACQUITTED

Former Artist's Model Accused of Slaying Husband With Nail File.

DEFENCE IS KEPT SECRET

By Boston American Leased Wire.

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., April 27.—The defence for "Goldie" Neil, who is in the Bridgeport jail accused of murdering her husband, Joseph Neil, a Greenwich blacksmith, is a secret, and will remain so until the day of the trial. Her attorney, Carl Foster of Bridgeport, has worked unceasingly on every phase of this most peculiar case, and he will not divulge his plan of defence for the accused woman. The popular belief is that it probably will be that of self-defence.

Lawyer Foster is one of the leading criminal lawyers of Connecticut. Within the last eight years he has defended several men and women accused of murder, and on only one of the cases was there a conviction.

Sure He'll Save Her.

Mr. Foster has told several persons, interested in the fate of the beautiful artist's model, that he is in possession of important evidence that when brought before a jury will certainly acquit his client.

Before her marriage to Neil she was married to a New York policeman named Finley. She sought a divorce from him and engaged Lawyer Edward Greenthal to get it for her. Before her marriage to Finley she was an artist's model and her beautiful auburn hair was her crowning glory. She was also in the chorus of many Broadway musical productions and she was much sought after. Differences arose between herself and her husband after her little girl died.

When the woman was arrested, accused of killing Neil, Mrs. Finley, her mother-in-law, said that she would stand by her former daughter-in-law and give her as much aid as she possibly could.

Death Aids Her Case.

It is asserted that the family of the murdered man is seeking vengeance for his death.

The death of Dr. Jones of Greenwich, who performed the autopsy on Neil and who said that the nail file found in the room was the weapon that caused Neil's death, has strengthened the woman's case materially. His death may save the life of Goldie Neil.

BALL TEAMS CONTEND FOR PORTLAND CRIER

PORTLAND, Me., April 27.—William P. Carroll, the town crier of Portland, is the centre of a contention between the rival ball nines of this city, both of whom desire his services to announce their games. Mr. Carroll says that he will work for the team that will pay him the most.

REPUBLICANS PRAISE GRAVES; REBUKE LODGE

City Committee Give Vote of Confidence to Chairman Under Ban of Senator.

The Republican City Committee, twenty-one out of the twenty-five members being present, has voted Chairman Edward G. Graves a unanimous vote of confidence and indirectly thereby administered a rebuke to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge.

Mr. Lodge has treated Chairman Graves rather cavalierly in the past. When Jerry McCarthy was up for reappointment as surveyor of the port, Mr. Graves went to Washington to see the Massachusetts senators and enter a protest. He pointed out that while McCarthy was nominally a Republican he supported Fitzgerald, a Democrat, for Mayor, and that his appointment for another term would tend to discourage the Republicans of this city who believed that those who had worked for the interests of the party in this city should be rewarded. He came back to Boston with what he thought was a positive assurance that McCarthy would not be re-appointed, but that gentleman got the plum just the same.

Again, once on a time, the Senator made an engagement to meet Chairman Graves at Republican city headquarters, which he failed to keep. He arrived late and wanted the chairman to return to headquarters, but got the reply that if he wanted to see Mr. Graves he could see Mr. Graves at Mr. Graves's place of business. He did so and it has been the general impression since, that on that occasion Mr. Graves talked right out to the senior Senator straight from the shoulder.

Anyway, there has been something of a coolness since on the part of Mr. Lodge toward the head of the city Republicans and the moral of the action of the committee is plain.

LOST GIRL AND $250,000, QUIT 'ANGEL' ROLE

Young Largey, Millionaire, Disappointed Financially and in Quest of Nina Blake's Hand.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 27.—"I want to be an angel, and with the angels stand," in a theatrical sense, no longer appeals to Sellers Largey, the young millionaire banker and mine owner of Butte, Mont.

It cost young Mr. Largey just about $250,000 of his patrimony, according to his own statements placed on file with the New Jersey courts and made public yesterday, to be an "angel" for a period of three years or more, acting during this time as the silent but productive partner of the Will J. Block Amusement Company, which produced something like nine shows, one of which is "Coming Thro' the Rye," now playing in Boston.

At last he is tired and says he can profit more thoroughly and quickly by managing his own companies.

Mr. Block, who left his office about ten days ago to be absent one day in Boston, has not returned.

Romance Back of the Venture.

There is a very pretty little romance back of the backing of the Will J. Block Company by Largey, and this is that all his plans and expenditures were directed toward a successful career for Miss Nina Blake, a young and very beautiful woman, admired by Mr. Largey from the time he first saw her; and it is she, so the story goes, who directed the formation of the company with Mr. Block as directing head.

Miss Blake is reported to have refused Mr. Largey's offer of marriage, or rather to have put him off from time to time, until he became convinced that Miss Blake's heart was bestowed elsewhere, and the quarter in which her heart lay, as suspected by Mr. Largey, was revealed in the quick action against the Will J. Block Amusement Company. He is endeavoring to throw the company into bankruptcy on a demand note for $200,000, which he says he advanced beyond the original $50,000 invested in the enterprise.

No Longer a "Good Thing."

"I am no longer a theatrical angel—a good thing. I have reformed, and now I will take up shows as a cold business proposition," said Mr. Largey, yesterday.

About four years ago, just after Mr. Largey reached his majority and inherited his one-third share of the estate of his father, valued at about $10,000,000, the Anna Held show came to Butte and among the members was Nina Blake. A year later the company returned and with it came Miss Blake and again he became devoted to her, and soon became the backer of the Block Company.

$5,000,000 LEFT WIDOW BY SMITH'S LONDON WILL

Lady Cooper, Millionaire's Sister Gets $20,000,000 and Other Relatives Are Generously Remembered.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Under the terms of the London will of James Henry Smith, the main features of which were made known to the American last night, the widow, who was Mrs. Rhinelander Stewart, receives but $5,000,000, or an income from that sum.

Lady Cooper, sister of the multi-millionaire, inherits $20,000,000. Others of his blood relatives get liberal bequests.

Friends of Mrs. Smith declare that she will not be satisfied with the provisions made for her in this testament and will contest it. The will is reported to be in the possession of Sir George and Lady Cooper, who arrived in New York Thursday night. They are here to meet the other heirs, who heartily approve the London will.

Fear Later Will Made.

On the other hand, however, fear is expressed by Sir George Cooper that there is another and later will made just after Mr. Smith's marriage, and which is now in the keeping of Mrs. Smith, in this Mr. Smith is believed to have made far more liberal provisions for his widow.

If the second will gives the lion's share of the estate to Mrs. Smith and thus greatly decreases the prospective share of the relatives in the estate, they will contest. They are determined to fight for all they can get.

No matter which document proves to be authentic one of the greatest will contests the United States has ever seen is imminent.

The remainder of the estate, after Mrs. Smith's share, is set aside, and certain large annuities have been paid, will go to "Silent" Smith's relatives—brothers and sisters and their survivors. It is said that favoritism is shown in behalf of those who bear the Smith name.

The comparatively slight provision for the widow is accounted for by the fact that when the London will was drawn Mr. Smith was much aggravated by spiteful society gossip which ascribed fortune-hunting proclivities to his wife. In order to guard her the provision was made either for $5,000,000 or an annual income.

The matter was complicated yesterday by a denial from Sir George Cooper that he had brought the London will to this country.

Sir George Expects Later Will.

It was he who intimated that there was a later will—one drawn just before Mr. Smith sailed with his bride for Japan. If this later will is in existence it is undoubtedly in the possession of Mrs. Smith, who is now on the high seas between Honolulu and San Francisco with the body of her husband.

"Silent" Smith's relatives, none of whom except Lady Cooper had ever before been heard of in New York, are gathering in this city to listen to the reading of the will.

The attitude of the waiting members of the family is one of anxiety and doubt. If a new will exists it can only be determined on the arrival of Mrs. Smith in this country.

FIGHTS CUBAN CIGAR TRUST

HAVANA, April 27.—Every cigar factory in the Province of Havana is closed today, practically cutting off the entire output of Cuban cigars, for the manufacture in the other provinces is comparatively small.

Since February, the cigarmakers in the trust factories have been on strike, demanding that they be paid in American instead of Spanish money. Eight thousand men are out. Only one trust factory has been working. Now, the independent factories have decided to lock out their men as a means of terminating the strike, believing that they will thus cut off the trust strikers from their personal source of support.

BRYAN TALKS IN HUB TOMORROW

William J. Bryan, who is making a speaking tour of New England, will make a flying visit to Boston tomorrow evening, and will be the guest of the Rev. Charles A. Crane, pastor of the People's Temple. He will arrive in time to speak at the services at the Temple, which start at 7:30 p. m.

The "Prince of Peace" will be Mr. Bryan's subject. He will leave Boston about midnight for the continuation of his trip.

1 DEAD, 6 HURT; COLLISION.

WOMEN IN PANIC TRAMPLED, DIE

PALERMO, Sicily, April 27.—The deep bass tones of a church organ were responsible for a disastrous panic here today, in which two women were trampled to death and a hundred others were seriously hurt in a wild stampede to get out of the building.

The frequent earthquakes which have been felt recently have kept the populace in a state of alarm. When the low, rumbling tones of the organ were heard there was a wild rush for the doors, as the worshippers believed another earthquake had struck the town.

"LIFER" ASKS FOR PARDON.

WED SECRETLY ON AUTO TRIP

WORCESTER, April 27.—Slipping away secretly from her Gardner home, May J. Kendall, one of the prettiest girls in the town, joined Guy H. Shepard in a hasty automobile trip to Fitchburg, where they were married by Justice of the Peace Walter A. Davis. The marriage was made known by Miss Kendall's mother, Mrs. Mary Kendall, by the receipt of her daughter's wedding gown.

The couple, according to arrangements, were to have been married in a Gardner church this week.

QUINCY AND GASTON TOGETHER AGAIN

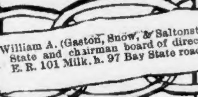
COPYRIGHT BY E. CHICKERING 1902.

GASTON.



William A. (Gaston, Snow, & Saltonstall), 70 State and chairman board of directors, B. E. R. 101 Milk. h. 97 Bay State road

THE CONNECTING LINK.
From the Boston City Directory.

QUINCY.

THIS picture of Colonel W. A. Gaston of the Boston Elevated Railway, and Josiah Quincy, Boston Transit Commissioner, appeared in the BOSTON AMERICAN on September 5, 1906. It was used at that time to show the close relationship between the man who had been selected to regulate the street railways and the man who was the guiding power of the street railway system itself.

The printed matter in that portion of the picture which connects the two photographs is a fac-simile of an entry in the Boston City Directory showing that W. A. Gaston was chairman of the board of directors of the Boston Elevated Railway.

Everybody knew that Mr. Quincy reported regularly to Mr. Gaston for instructions, but they hardly expected that Mr. Quincy would acknowledge the close relationship between himself and the man who looks after the political interests of the Traction Trust.

Yesterday, however, Mr. Quincy, being queried by New York reporters who wanted to know his connection with the men who looted the Trust Company of America, was unable to make a statement until he had consulted Mr. Gaston. When he did give out the statement, Mr. Gaston's name was at the head of it, and it was distinctly announced that Mr. Gaston was Mr. Quincy's "personal counsel."

The head of the Boston Elevated Railway is personal counsel for the official whose duty it is to regulate the railway.

CONRIED, ILL, DE RESZKE TO DIRECT OPERA?

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 27.—There is now practically no doubt that a successor of Herr Conried will rule over the destiny of the Metropolitan Opera House next season. The faint hope that the director of last season would return for another year is all dispelled by advices received in the city during the last few days, which tend to confirm the worst reports regarding the impressario's health.

When Conried left America he turned over his Irving Place Theatre to another, and after his departure an agent sold his residence. The only tie that still bound him to this country was the Metropolitan, and he left that in such a way that it could be turned over to a successor with but slight interruption of the routine of the organization.

Who will succeed Conried is the question that is agitating the musical world. That the position has been tentatively offered to more than one is known. The most interesting of the names thus far is that of Jean De Reszke.

It can be said that, although Herr Conried's remuneration for presiding over the Metropolitan was not necessarily so great as De Reszke's earnings, a matter of price will not be the deciding point.

Henry Russell of the Don Carlo Opera Company, Daniel Frohman and Henry Higgins of London are possibilities, but, next to De Reszke, Anton Fuchs of Munich is far more likely to succeed Conried than any of the others.

CHIEF DENIES DELAY IN AID FOR DYING MAN

Denying that the Revere police were called upon for an ambulance to rush Harry Dorfman, a young carpenter, to the Relief Hospital in Boston, when he fell twenty feet through a new house at Shirley and Taunton street, Revere, and broke his left ankle and leg, Police Chief Rhoades of Revere to-day says that Patrolman Shanahan, when sent to the place to investigate, offered the services of the police ambulance, but that it was refused.

Dorfman, who is twenty-three years of age, fell through the opening in the house which had been cut for the stairs. Fellow-workmen rushed to the offices of Drs. Morrison and Burchmore, but they were not to be had. Then they ran to the drug store of Jacobus Van Der Haien, Walnut avenue and Beach street, and asked that the police be notified by 'phone.

This was done, and Officer Shannahan was sent to investigate. The man fell at 10:30 o'clock and when the policeman arrived on the scene he found that the carpenters, he says, had placed Dorfman in a carpenter's wagon preparing to take him in that to the Relief Hospital. He offered, he says, the services of the police ambulance, but the men refused.

Their course lay past the Revere and Chelsea police stations, in each of which there were ambulances, and close to the Chelsea Hospital. To-day Dorfman was removed from the Relief Hospital, where his friends took him yesterday, to the City Hospital, where it is said his condition is quite serious and that he has sustained internal injuries as well as a broken limb.

FIREMEN OVERCOME BY FUMES AT FIRE

CHICAGO, April 27.—Twelve firemen overcome by smoke and salt petrefumes in the hide cellar of the Hammond Packing Company's beef house which caught fire early to-day.

BAR LOW NECKS AT BIG FAIR OF ACTORS' FUND

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Decollete gowns will be barred at the Actors' Fund fair. The fiat has gone forth, and any woman who violates this rule will be ordered from the floor. No mitigating circumstances like a rounded throat or a pretty shoulder will be taken into consideration. Gentle women must adopt high cut or be banished.

The announcement was made at the meeting of the women's committee yesterday at the Belasco Theatre. Mrs. A. M. Palmer, from the chair, presented the edict early in the proceedings and at once met with a storm of protest. Women with necks trained to publicity objected on the score of the loss of prestige. They declared magnificent dressing would make the affair twice as brilliant and elegant evening gowns involved decolletage. What, they argued, would the opera house horseshoe be without it. But Mrs. Palmer was adamant. She said the rule had been made for a former fair and would be enforced at this.

Miss Dorothy Usner rose to ask if Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish, Mrs. James Speyer and other society leaders who have proffered their assistance at the fair had been advised of this regulation. The custom being prevalent at all evening affairs, she said, they would naturally expect to come gowned in the usual way and should be warned in time.

Mrs. Palmer replied that she had not notified them specially, but that a copy of the rules would be sent to them.

STORY BARRED AT THAW TRIAL, SAYS WITNESS

PARIS, April 27.—James Clinch Smith, brother-in-law of the late Stanford White, has returned to Paris. Although he was silent about the Thaw case in New York, he has spoken to intimate friends here without reserve.

A curious phase of the case is that Thaw was unaware that Smith was any relation of White until several days after the shooting and that is supposed to account for his endeavor on the fatal night to have Smith take under his protection the "brunette" mentioned in Smith's testimony at the trial, whom Thaw, anticipating trouble, evidently wanted to get rid of.

Mr. Smith is positive that by the actions of both Thaw and his wife that some crime was premeditated, though he would never have imagined it would be murder. Smith stood near Evelyn Thaw when Thaw left her to seek White. He says he noticed her extreme agitation at the time, and was not surprised when he heard a shot and saw a man prostrate. He was not aware it was White till later.

Mr. Smith says he has information that Thaw was much disturbed when he learned that he (Smith) was White's brother-in-law. Thaw wrote a letter to his attorneys which is still in existence, telling them he had no idea of Smith's relationship when he talked with him on the fatal night.

Smith says he was not permitted to tell all these facts on the stand.

SEEK FALSE KEY WORKER.

The Somerville police are hunting for a false key worker who entered the home of Thomas Clarke at No. 16 Laurel street, that city, yesterday afternoon and stole jewelry valued at $70.

MEYER TO QUIT; HAS TOO MUCH CORTELYOU?

The unexpected visit of Postmaster-General George von L. Meyer to Boston, his home city, where he is expected to-night, has given rise to persistent rumor in advance of his arrival here, that he is so dissatisfied with his position as head of the postal service that he is on the point of resigning his new portfolio.

His city home at No. 54 Beacon street is being prepared for his coming, the caretakers having received orders to expect him to-night.

Dispatches from Washington to the BOSTON AMERICAN to-day say that the cause of Mr. Meyer's dissatisfaction with his two-months-old position is that there is "too much Cortelyou" in the department. The new head of the postal service found everything was prepared by the present Secretary of the Treasury before he left the service to which Mr. Meyer succeeded. There are no contracts to let, no postmasters to appoint, no salaries to be raised or reduced, no policies to be initiated.

All of the things that could be thought of before Mr. Cortelyou left the postal service were arranged. First Assistant Postmaster-General Hitchcock, a pupil of Secretary Cortelyou, it is said, still takes orders from Mr. Cortelyou.

The various bureau chiefs are paying more attention to what Mr. Cortelyou "would have done," and they get their inspiration from Mr. Hitchcock.

It is said Postmaster-General Meyer complained bitterly. He wants a change. He is said to have told the President he does not like his berth, and to keep at least an outward show of harmony in his official family it is reported that there will be Cabinet changes and Mr. Meyer will get a new place.

25,000 TO ASK MORE PAY AT NEW BEDFORD

Special to the Boston American.

NEW BEDFORD, April 27.—Twenty-five thousand mill operatives of this city will ask for an advance of wages next week as the result of the action taken in Fall River yesterday, when operatives and manufacturers met in conference and practically agreed upon an advance of 10 per cent.

It is probable that the same increase will be demanded by the operatives here. The exact nature of the demand will be decided upon Monday at a meeting of the New Bedford Textile Council, which is comprised of twenty delegates from unions representing every branch of the trade. It is thought the increase will be granted, as the mills are doing the most prosperous business. The demand will be sent to Otis N. Pierce, president of the Manufacturers' Association. A conference between the labor council and the Manufacturers' Association will follow.

PEOPLE PASS ON B. & A. PLAN? 'TIS TO LAUGH!

President Bliss Amused by Absurdity of Giving Springfield Citizens a Say.

HEARING ABRUPTLY ENDS

"Hee, hee, hee, ho, ho, ho, haw, haw, haw!"

For a few minutes, in one of the chambers on the fourth floor of the State House yesterday, they thought that William Bliss, of Exeter street, in the Back Bay, president of the Boston & Albany and director of the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad, was going to choke with laughter. He turned almost purple.

President Bliss is seventy-two years old, but tall as a young sapling and every bit as spry as President Charles Sanger Mellen of the New Haven, fifty-five, or Vice-President Edgar Van Etten of the Central, sixty-four years old.

Opposed New Haven's Demand.

With the vice-president of the Central, which leased the Boston & Albany lines in 1900 and so placed President Bliss in semi-retirement, the septuagenarian president of the Albany had come to protest against giving the New York, New Haven & Hartford a two-track right of way on the five-track stretch of the Albany through the city of Springfield.

The city Beautiful wants the New Haven road to give up two miles and a half along the Connecticut River. The New Haven is willing, but only on condition that it shall have a right of way through the town. The new location would be much better for the New Haven's future than the present location, which has led to a Boston & Albany insinuation that the beautifying suggestion originated not far from the hat of President Charles Sanger Mellen. To which insinuation President Mellen demurs.

All three of the railroad headliners had just agreed that the best thing to do with the proposition is to leave it to a commission of experts, with merely recommendatory power, when Senate Chairman Faxon, a man without guile, suggested, gently:

"Or to the people, Mr. Bliss?"

Mr. Bliss chuckled, but he wasn't quite sure.

"Hee, hee!" he said. "Er, what's that, sir?"

"I suggested," said Dr. Faxon, "that we might leave it to the people of Springfield."

Then Mr. Bliss Laughed.

And then Mr. Bliss laughed—laughed just like Sam laughs in the Sunday supplement:

"Hee, hee, hee, ho, ho, ho, haw, haw, haw!"

The examination halted.

They got a glass of water for him, and one of the Albany's vice-presidents, a former Congressman from Woburn, reached for the Bliss overcoat. They were going away from there.

Charles W. Bosworth, special counsel in the matter for the city of Springfield, had one or two questions for President Bliss, but they whispered Bosworth out of it, in view of the fact that Mr. Bliss has a particularly heavy cold, and the Boston & Albany president left the room, still chuckling.

Do You Believe in Divorces?

BY WINIFRED BLACK

DO you know anyone who doesn't believe in divorce?

Have you a friend who raises her eyebrows in sanctimonious disapproval every time you mention the name of some poor woman who dragged herself through the slime of the divorce court for her children's sake?

Have you a speaking acquaintance with some well-meaning clergyman who has a beautiful time preaching sermons about the curse of the age, divorce?

Just cut this letter out and put it in your purse. The next time one of these unthinking people who mean so well has something to say about the horror of divorce just show him or her this little clipping:

> Dear Madam—I have just read your interesting article on "Woman's Foolish Loyalty," and I fully agree with you in all you say. Children should be protected and not brought up in an atmosphere of sin, but have you ever stopped to consider the kind of laws, or rather want of them, a poor woman has against a brutal, drunken husband, who will not leave and not allow her to leave?
>
> I know it from experience. Years ago when after great strategy I finally got away from my husband and was making a nice living at my trade for my children he scoured the city for me until he finally found me out.
>
> Was there a law to keep him out?
>
> No, no; the law claims it is his home.
>
> He is king, although he never put a stick of furniture in it. Of course, I can get a warrant whenever he beats me and have him put up for a month or two or six, to go through the same performance every time he comes out. But what respectable person, brought up in a decent home, wants to do that?
>
> If I had money I could get a separation, but I have none, nor am I able to make a living now, for I have been beaten deaf and the strength beaten out of me, and have not a relative to go to. Yet I would rather beg if the law would only keep him away and leave me and my children in peace.
>
> If we had better law there would be less use for the electric chair. I am only one of thousands, I regret to say. Dear Madam, could you not appeal for laws for the protection of the innocent? E. C.

Law All Right

THE law is all right, my poor friend. The men who make the laws in this country are pretty decent fellows, after all, if we do call them names sometimes.

There is no law in America which can force any woman to live with her husband if she does not want to live with him.

All you have to do if you want to get away from your husband is to leave him. If he doesn't like your leaving him he can divorce you for desertion in almost any State in the Union, and in no State in the Union can you be compelled to take him into your home, if he finds you and tries to make you live with him again.

You ought to have divorced this man when you were young and strong and able to work. That is the mistake so many women make. They wait too long, but now that you have waited till your courage and strength have been beaten out of you, there is still just one thing for you to do:

Leave this man.

Take your children away with you.

Go to the nearest university settlement if you live in a large city, and to the nearest lawyer of good repute if you live in a small place.

Help Will Come

YOU will find friends and help. Any decent lawyer will help you get your freedom for your children's sake and he will wait for his pay.

Tell him the truth.

Don't try to make him think that you have money.

Throw yourself and your children upon his kindness.

You have no right to bring poor little innocent children up in such an atmosphere of misery.

You say you are not able to work for a living. You must do a great deal of work to keep your poor excuse of a home together at all.

When you are free from this horror of agonizing fear you will be like a different woman.

New roads will open to you.

You will find friends who will help you, if you show that you are willing and anxious to help yourself.

No one sympathizes with a woman who lives with a brutal husband.

When you have left this man, you will find that many of the people who will not even listen to you now will do everything they can to help you when they see that you have enough strength of character to take yourself and your children out of this degradation and misery.

The law of this country is all right as far as women are concerned.

Live up to it, and it will prove a strong friend and a willing one.

A BECOMING WAIST FOR A YOUNG GIRL

5792

No. 5,792—A round yoke of bands of insertion is a charming feature of this pretty waist. The shirring in front and back provides the fulness so becoming to the figure of the young girl. The closing is in the back and a fitted lining gives support to the waist, although it may be omitted if desired. The sleeves may be in elbow or full length, the latter terminating in deep cuffs, which may also be of the insertion. Batiste, lawn, taffeta, pongee and voile would all reproduce charmingly. For a girl of sixteen years 2¼ yards of 36-inch material will be required.

No. 5,792—Sizes for 15, 16 and 17 years.

To obtain this pattern, postpaid, send 10 cents and the size, name and address to the BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 230, Boston, Mass., allowing one week for delivery.

Useful Dress With Two Waists

Low Neck Waist With Shoulder Straps of Wide Black Velvet

House Gown of Black Foulard Waist Made in Surplice Style

Black Foulard Is Height of Fashion

A VERY useful dress is the black foulard, and it is a good idea to have it made with two waists, a high neck and an evening waist.

These designs show two pretty modes, which may be easily copied by clever fingers.

The low-neck waist is made with a deep folded girdle, a band of lace above it forming a straight line across the top and full sleeves of ruffle of lace. For shoulder straps a wide black velvet band is used, the ends allowed to hang in long loops both back and front.

The high-neck waist is made in surplice fashion, crossing in front over a deep yoke of lace. Little revers turn back over the silk and are covered with silver embroidery. A touch of color is introduced by a fold of blue satin between the lace and the revers.

The sleeves are in the kimono style over undersleeves of net with pleated ruffles.

The skirt is in the new gored circular style with a wide sweep and a deep fold at the foot.

CHAPTER CIV.

A Hunted Man

"THE woman I sought!" cried Basil Thurston, as he extended his hands to the beautiful woman. "My quest has not been in vain. Of your existence I heard in Russia, where I journeyed to unravel the career of that unparalleled scoundrel. Of his abuse of you and your justifiable hatred for him I have learned.

"But I can also tell you another thing—that he has lost his power as the favored spy of the Russian Cabinet. His double dealing and avarice that have led to his betraying their secrets to other nations were revealed through my efforts, and now he is a proscribed and hunted man by the despots, who seek his life as eagerly as do the revolutionists he has betrayed so often. The career of Carl Mueller is fast ending."

Basil related the story of his research, inspired by his love for Sylvia, who still sought vengeance on the slayer of her brother. That Mme. Slavinsky was in New York they had learned and had found her stopping place and arrived a few minutes after the entrance of Frank and Suzanne.

The disposition of the latter puzzled Frank and Vera, who now inclined to the belief that she was wholly guiltless of intent to kill Reginald Bracebridge.

"I don't believe myself that she intended going that far," said Detective Loftus, "but the law in the matter is plain enough. I'll have to hold her for some time until an investigation is made. Her name will not be entered in the police records in the meantime. If we find that her story is O. K. and that the murderer of Reginald Bracebridge is dead, she probably will be turned loose in a few weeks. In the meantime she'll have to spend her time in the Tombs."

When the detective had turned the woman over to his partner, who had accompanied him, and re-entered the room, a conference, of which Carl Mueller was the theme, was held.

While Frank still feared he might attempt to renew his attack on Vera Slavinsky, the detective declared himself incredulous of Mueller's appearance.

"Mixed up between the millstones of Russian spies and revolutionists and sought for three murders, of which two would surely send him to the gallows, Carl Mueller is going to get out of this country in mighty lively fashion," Loftus said.

Escaped? No!

"It does seem probable," mused Frank.

"It is a certainty," said Vera Slavinsky. "There in South America he could change his name. He knows the country. He would not dare return to Europe. He has escaped."

"Escaped; no!" rang out the voice of Sylvia Thurston. "Where one airship can go another can follow. We must pursue this man. Mr. Bracebridge, if you will not pursue in your airship, then I shall do so on land. I have said I will follow him to the end of the earth. Must I go alone?"

"No," rang out three voices as one, and Frank Bracebridge leaned over and placed his hand on the shoulder of the vengeful woman. "You are right; the earth has been too long burdened with that man. To-morrow my airship will be put in commission and we will follow him, even to the ends of the earth."

As the quartet who had suffered at the hands of Carl Mueller clasped hands over the compact, Detective Loftus looked smilingly on.

"Well, I've been in many a queer manhunt," he observed, "but this surely is the limit. I'm doubtful if my jurisdiction extends over the Andes Mountains, but I've started on the hunt for this man Mueller, and I hate to admit that he's beaten me. There aren't many of his kind can say it, and I don't like to add him to the small and select few. So if you gentlemen will accept my company I'd like to join in the little chase."

"Willing? You know how eager I am to have you with us, Loftus," exclaimed Frank. "If the man is found it will be due to your astuteness, and he will be your prisoner."

"Well, I'll join you and carry extradition papers for Mr. Mueller," said Loftus, "although I imagine a large-calibred revolver is more sensible. When can we start?"

"To-morrow, if necessary," said Frank. "At least the moment we get trace of him."

CHAPTER CV.

Above the Andes

THREE days later a South American sun beamed down upon one of the strangest scenes its rays had ever lighted. Gleaming back against the silvered peaks of the mighty Andes, above the tops of many of which it soared, a cigar-shaped thing with whirling side-wheels and undulating rudder was darting.

So high above the ground that to even the keen-sighted pampas dwellers gazing up through the clear air is resembled little save a gigantic condor, yet in a tiny cabin four muffled human beings gathered peering straight and eagerly ahead. At the prow another, as closely muffled, turned a wheel as of an automobile, while the airship answered the guiding hands unhesitatingly.

All eyes were bent upon a black speck many miles ahead, and field glasses in the hands of all were turned toward it. Hesitancy, resulting from the great range, had hushed all until suddenly an exulting cry burst forth from a woman's throat.

Vengeance

"It is he!" cried Sylvia Thurston. "It is an airship, and I can see a form moving about. Our time of vengeance has come!"

Amost at the same instance the eyes of the others had assured themselves that the woman's sight had been true. The chase that had extended over thousands of miles had not been in vain.

At the steering wheel Frank Bracebridge heaved a sigh of relief. At last he was to close with the man who had entered his life seemingly with the sole intent of injuring those he loved.

In the airship ahead Carl Mueller apparently was not attempting escape from the larger boat that swooped down upon him. Through his field glasses he must have long since recognized his pursuers, but seemingly their approach concerned him little. The airship guided by him was swooping about in a huge circle, and as the larger boat drew nearer they saw the man's eyes were directed to the earth below.

Involuntarily their eyes followed his and a cry burst from Frank and Loftus:

"The lost diamond mine!"

In a valley formed by the joining together of three mighty peaks a queer sight met their gaze. Evidences of human habitation and human arts were many, the first the aerial navigators had seen since they penetrated the mountains. Evidence also of a convulsion of nature that was not of far distant date, also was seen.

A short distance away a great platform or altar of rock arose, but little shaken by the seismic disturbance that had brought death to its votaries.

Across its top the whitened skeleton of a man lay. It was that of a man of gigantic stature, and the right arm was stretched forth even in death as if to grasp or command.

"It is the head priest," whispered Frank, almost reverently; "he who pronounced the curse."

"Then there must be the diamond mine," said Loftus.

Frank nodded his head.

"Stop, I Tell You!"

Then their attention, momentarily distracted from Mueller, was again riveted upon him as he called to them. Although almost a half-mile away, his voice rang clearly in their ears through the rarified atmosphere.

"Mr. Bracebridge, you have had a long chase. Now is it not time for you to turn back?"

Muttering a curse at his insolence, Frank called out sharply:

"Yes, we shall start back in a short time, but you will accompany us, either as a prisoner or a corpse."

"You are mistaken again, you fool," rang out the sneering voice, and both women shuddered at the memories it awakened.

"Do you not suppose I knew you would pursue, and made preparations?" Mueller continued. "Stop where you are. Come no nearer to me; we can talk at this range."

Frank gave no heed to the call, and the airship was still speeding toward Muller's when a shot rang out. A bullet whistled close beside the head of the pilot, narrowly missing the car.

"Is that evidence of my good intentions?" called Dr. Mueller. "Stop, I tell you!"

"Better stop, Frank," advised Loftus, as he approached Bracebridge, "that fellow has got some mighty good shooting irons and knows how to use them. If he hits you it's good night to the rest of us. We can't run the car."

"Can't we come to terms in this matter?" Mueller called. "If you will permit me one day in the diamond mine and allow me to depart, I promise never more to return to America and to disappear from your lives forever."

To be Concluded Tomorrow.

Don't Marry a Man With a Vague Hope of Reforming Him

By Beatrice Fairfax

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

One year and a half ago I married a man. I knew he drank, but he told me he would give it up if I would marry him. I gave up a good position and we got married. He did give it up for a whole year, but has now gone back to his old companions, and, oh! the life I live. He comes home so drunk and spends so much money! We have a lovely little home, and no matter what condition he comes home in I never scold him. He begs me every time to forgive him, and because of my great love for him I do. But lately he never takes me out anywhere. I won't go without him. I can find no pleasure without him.

Oh, Miss Fairfax, I would not deprive him of his men friends, but they only do him harm. He tells me so himself sometimes. He always treats me fine when anyone is here. He likes to have every one think the best of him. It is so hard to know that our dear little home must be broken up just for drink. What can I do? My heart will break. I cannot stand it much longer. I wait and wait sometimes for him to come at all hours of the night until I think I must die and leave it all.

What must I do—either suicide or leave him? HEART-BROKEN.

I GIVE the above letter in full in the hope that it may prove a lesson to some girl who contemplates marrying a man to reform him.

It is a scheme that never, never works, and the sooner woman realizes that fact the better it will be for her.

To love a man and cast him off to fight alone against temptation seems to any loving, tender-hearted woman the acme of heartlessness.

When he vows that he will brace up and be a man with her beside him to help him she feels it her duty to do all she can.

But she must learn that a manly man will not dump the responsibility of his reformation on to a weak woman's shoulders. The man who is strong enough to stop drinking will do it of his own accord. If he cannot stand alone the reformation will be but short-lived.

It is all right to help a man all you can by encouragement, but never marry him until years of abstinence have proved his strength.

Hardly a day passes that I do not hear of some girl who has wrecked her life by marrying a man to reform him. The good resolutions last for a few months, then the wife's influence wears off, and things are worse than ever.

The pretty little home goes to wrack and ruin, the wife loses hope, health and looks. There is nothing but misery everywhere.

I tell you, girls, that no matter how handsome and irresistible a man may be, he is no good if he drinks. Before you marry be absolutely sure that the man is sober and industrious.

If he is given to drinking he never will provide a decent home for you. You and your children will be miserable and poverty-stricken.

If a man says to you, "Marry me and I will reform and do great things," you answer him, "Reform first and prove your ability to do great things and then I will marry you."

A man has no right to drag a woman down with him, and he knows quite well that if he can reform at all he can do it just as well without as with her.

Undoubtedly the prospect of winning her in the future will help him, but if he wins her first he will be pretty sure to relax his efforts.

Keep this in mind, girls. Read over this poor little woman's experience and don't be carried away by promises.

Let the man win you before you marry him.

SALAD DRESSING

FOUR tablespoons of butter, one tablespoon of flour, one tablespoon of salt, one tablespoon of sugar, one large teaspoon of mustard, one speck of cayenne pepper, one cup of cream, half a cup of vinegar, three whole eggs or the yolks of six eggs. Let butter get hot in saucepan; add the flour and stir till smooth, being careful not to brown; add the cream and boil. Place the saucepan in another of hot water. Beat the eggs, salt, pepper, sugar and mustard together, and add the vinegar. Stir all this in the boiling mixture, and stir till it thickens. When cool, bottle and put in icebox. Will keep good for one month. MRS. A. H. WANZER.

No. 61 Bainbridge street, Roxbury.

BAKED STUFFED FISH

TAKE haddock or any small fish and dress for baking. Stuff with following dressing, sew up, cut in slice fashion about four times; fill space with salt pork strips and sprinkle with salt and flour. Baste with its own liquor.

DRESSING.

Four common crackers, one cucumber pickle, one teaspoon salt (small), one teaspoon black pepper, a little cayenne pepper, one onion, one and one-half cups melted butter; run crackers, pickle and onion through grinder or chop fine, add salt, pepper, then butter.

SAUCE.

Beat yolks of two eggs; add one-half lemon (juice), one cup boiling water, one-half cup melted butter. Let this come to boiling point, move to double boiler and keep hot till served. MRS. HENRY L. TITER.

No. 16 Clifford street, Readville.

EGG SOUP

A SHIN bone of veal, cut into six pieces, about three pounds in weight. Wash and place over fire with two and a half quarts cold water. Simmer six hours, or until liquid is reduced to one and a half quarts. Strain and set liquid aside over night. Soak a small cup of sago over night in two cups of scalded milk, lukewarm, with one-half teaspoon of salt. In the morning skim off what fat there may be from the stock. Cover the shin bone with water and simmer two or three hours, then strain and add the liquid to the first made stock. Now place a plate in the soup pot to prevent scorching, pour in the stock, add the sago and boil gently until liquid has reduced somewhat; for example, if it measures exactly one quart and a pint, it may be reduced to one quart and a half-pint. Salt well. Remove pot from fire. Beat three fresh eggs well and add to these a half-pint of cream. Stir slowly and thoroughly into the soup until scalded. Add a seasoning of black pepper. This is a soup rich in nutriment and delicate. It is so grateful to the palate that one scarce knows when to stop eating. MARION OSGOOD.

No. 10 Bellingham street, Chelsea.

SCALLOPED POTATOES WITH PORK CHOPS

PARE potatoes and slice thin; put a layer in baking dish, then a layer of sliced onions, little salt, pepper and butter, and then another layer of potatoes, then onions, pepper, salt and butter, and so on until dish is filled. Then pour milk over them. Place the pork chops on the top and bake about an hour in a good, hot oven. When chops are brown on the top turn them over and brown on the other side. They are fine. MRS. F. W. CASEY.

No. 12A Pearl place, Somerville.

WATER LILY OR EGG SALAD

SIX eggs, one large head of lettuce; for boiled dressing take one egg, one-half cup milk (scant), three tablespoons vinegar, one tablespoon butter, one scant tablespoonful sugar, one-half teaspoonful salt, one-fourth teaspoonful mustard; sprinkle cayenne. Boil the eggs twenty minutes. When cold remove the shell, then cut the eggs in half, crossways. Carefully wash and wipe the lettuce; cut the large leaves into small shreds, but leave the nicest small ones whole. To make the dressing beat the egg until light; put all the ingredients, except the vinegar, into the top of a double boiler; stir until it thickens on the spoon; add vinegar and let it get cold. Put the finely shredded lettuce in the bottom of the platter, pour over it the dressing, arrange the leaves on top of it; put half an egg in centre of each leaf, garnish with radishes and watercress. MRS. THOMAS STACY.

No. 116 Second street, Leominster.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

BETTER WAIT AWHILE

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young girl of eighteen years of age and am engaged to a young man of twenty-three. He is very impatient and wants me to marry him this June. Now, he only makes $24 a week, and I do not think that enough to get along on and still save enough for a rainy day, and, again, I think I am too young to take such a step.

I will abide by your decision and do just as you think best, as I have no one else to consult. V. R.

HE is making enough for you to live on very comfortably, but unless you are sure you could manage on that sum without getting into debt it would be better to wait until he is making more. You are very young, and it would be wiser to wait for another year, and then you will know better what you can do.

HAVE AN UNDERSTANDING

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man, a bookkeeper in this town, and I keep company with a young lady about my age. But, sometimes this young lady goes with another young man to the theatre or elsewhere, and leaves me for that evening. Do you think she is trying to do me, or just joking? She is a very nice young lady, and I have known her for the last six years.

CHARLES B. GALLAGHER.

IF you have known her so long and ca enough for her to object to her goi with other men, I should think you wou ask her to marry you, and then she wo not want to go out with other men. Y have known her long enough to know y own mind in the matter I should think.

WED MAN HER SISTER WOULD NOT; SORRY NOW

Got Abuse Instead of Love and Hapiness, She Says— Asks Separate Support.

HUSBAND TWICE HER AGE

"I did not marry for money. I married for love and happiness, but got neither. I received abuse and profanity from the man with whom I entrusted my future.

With great tears coursin' down her pretty cheeks, Mrs. Mary E. Dorey, twenty-seven years, of No. 272 Lemartine street, Jamaica Plain, sobbed on the witness stand before Judge Lawton in the Middlesex County Probate Court yesterday that her love was not reciprocated and that her brief life of matrimony was one continued quarrel.

Affected apparently by her plaintive tale, John Dorey of No. 36 Temple street, Somerville, a retired sewer contractor with an estimated fortune of over $150,000, whom she is suing, wept in unison with her. He is over sixty years of age and it was his second matrimonal venture.

Warning that if her marriage should prove unhappy it would be her own fault was given Mrs. Dorey by her mother, Mrs. Ellen J. Gunning, according to the latter's testimony.

"I repeatedly said to her, testified Mrs. Gunning: "'Remember, Minnie, that if your marriage proves a failure you cannot blame me.'"

The unique proposal which Mr. Dorey made to Mrs. Gunning for the hand of either one of her daughters, Nellie and Mary, and of Nellie's refusal and Mary's acceptance, was also related in detail to the Court.

Wed Man Nellie Wouldn't.

"I did not plan out the marriage between Mr. Dorey and my daughter, said Mrs. Gunning. "Mr. Dorey asked me for one of my daughters in marriage. I asked Nellie. She refused because she said that she did not love him.

"Next I asked Mary and she accepted. I have known Mr. Dorey for thirty years and thought that I knew him well. I never asked him to take Mary back after they had separated. The idea. Why should I, after she was abused so by him."

For four hours, Mrs. Dorey, who is a striking brunette, sat in a chair in the witness stand and poured forth her troubles. She was followed on the witness stand by her eighteen-year-old sister, Agnes, and her mother, Mrs. Ellen J. Gunning. The case will be resumed next Thursday forenoon.

"Life was one continuous quarrel" said Mrs. Dorey on the stand. "I never sat down to a whist game with him but he did not quarrel. He would never stand to lose with good grace.

"I was in continual fear because of his crossness. I did not wish to be left alone with him. I asked my two sisters to remain with me and he ordered them out of the house.

"Curses were always in his mouth. He constantly swore at me during the months of December, 1905, and January and February, 1906. He used profanity occasionally during March and April, 1906, and received some letters from another young woman one year ago January.

I Liked Him Very Much.

I am without means. My folks have supported me at their home since I left him. I was married in St. Thomas's Church, Jamaica Plain, on August 9, 1906, and left him December 29, 1906. Neither of his sons was present at the marriage ceremony, though all my family was.

"It was a very short courtship that we had. I had never been in his house before our marriage, though he had been a constant visitor at ours for eight or nine years. He was an old friend of my father and we trusted him.

"Once he grabbed me by both wrists and shook me violently. Then he left me alone with a sick child one afternoon and evening, returning home at 12:15.

"After he smashed me full in the mouth with the back of his hand during a whist game, I never said a word to him. I continued playing because we had two gentlemen guests playing with us."

Between her sobs, with her voice half stifled by the dainty handkerchief with which she constantly wiped her eyes, Mrs. Dorey told of her love for her wealthy husband. She said:

"I liked Mr. Dorey very much before and when I married him. I thought that he liked me. I have been greatly deceived."

LABOR SEEKS $1,000,000 TO DEFEND MINERS

Aroused by Roosevelt's Utterances Against Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone.

PLANS MASS MEETINGS

NEW York labor unions have raised $101,000 for the defence of Moyer, Haywood and Pettibone, who are under indictment in Idaho for the alleged murder of ex-Governor Steunenberg. Of this amount $92,000 already has been spent for counsel fees and incidental expenses.

An attempt will be made to raise $1,000,000 to defend the prisoners. The unions expect to raise most of the fund in this country, by labor organizations in Europe will be asked to assist.

Labor leaders in discussing their plans declare that President Roosevelt's second letter on the subject of "undesirable citizenship" has so stirred union men that they expect no trouble in getting the desired amount.

At least $500,000, it is said, must be had to meet the demands of lawyers and other expenses.

DRINKS SODA, WOMAN DIES

Special to the Boston American.

NEW BEDFORD, April 27.—After drinking an ice cream soda in Brown's drug store on Union street last night Mrs. Mary McCormack, fifty-two, of No. 1108 Acushnet avenue, fell to the sidewalk dead. Her twenty-year-old daughter fainted twice in front of the drug store after her mother fell and is now in a serious condition at her home.

Whether the soda had anything to do with Mrs. McCormack's death and her daughter's illness is not known. Medical Examiner Garry Hough will perform an autopsy to-day. Dr. Melville De Label, the family physician, said that Mrs. McCormack suffered from heart disease for the past two months. He thinks that caused her death.

'ELIJAH' FEARS TO COME BACK

DURHAM, Me., April 27.—The Holy Ghost and Us colony at Shiloh has received a check for $10,000 and the members of the colony are fervently praying for another for double that amount. Most of those who returned from the Holy Land on the barkentine Kingdom Come came direct here. They said they did not know when Sanford would return. The captain of the barkentine said he expected him soon in his yacht, but it is reported that he is afraid to come back for fear of an examination as to his sanity.

DISAGREE IN TRIAL OF VERMONT EDITOR

PATERSON, N. J., April 27.—Because of a disagreement of the jury in the case of Luigi Galleani, the Barre, Vt., editor, who was charged with inciting to riot in connection with the silk mills strike several years ago, a mistrial was ordered by the court. Galleani was not allowed to testify. He refused to take an oath because he did not believe in the Bible.

ALIENISTS DECIDE HAMMOND INSANE

NEW YORK, April 27.—The alienists engaged on the case of James Bartlett Hammond, president of a typewriter company, and who for several days has been under observation at Bellevue Hospital, have decided Hammond incompetent to manage his own affairs.

PICK UP MAN'S BODY IN RIVER

The decomposed body of a man, which had been in the water for several weeks, was picked up by the harbor police to-day in the Charles River, near the Fitchburg railroad bridge in Charlestown. No marks of violence were noticed, and there was nothing in the pockets by which to identify him. The police believe he was a suicide. The body was removed to the North Grove street morgue, where Medical Examiner McGrath will perform an autopsy.

The man appears to have been forty-five years old; weight, 175 pounds; five feet nine inches tall; wore black worsted suit, white cotton negligee shirt with black stripes, blue socks and underwear, turndown linen collar and black four-in-hand tie and short heavy dark overcoat.

HIS SOLE HOPE TO REACH HOME TO DIE

PROVIDENCE, April 27.—Private advices received here say that the condition of Colonel William Goddard, banker and manufacturer, who arrived to-day from Aiken, S. C. is hopeless, and that the patient's sole desire seemed to be that he may reach here to die.

AMERICAN RECTOR OF NICE CHURCH HURT

NICE, April 27.—The Rev. William S. Adamson, rector of the American Church, was knocked down by a rapidly driven automobile yesterday and narrowly escaped serious injury.

ARBITRATION AT BROCKTON

The trouble between the members of Stationary Firemen's Union No. 27 and the W. L. Douglas Shoe Company at Brockton is to be settled by arbitration, and there will be no strike. The members of the union and Mr. Douglas, who is looked upon as the father of industrial arbitration in this State, are much pleased at this solution of the difficulty.

The union asked all of the firms employing its members for an eight-hour workday at $2.50 a day, and thirty-two cents an hour overtime. It was proposed by the company that the question be submitted to the State Board of Arbitration. This mode of settling differences of opinion is resorted to in connection with the firm's 3,500 shoemakers.

Finally a petition was drawn asking the State Board to take the matter in hand. This was filed on Thursday afternoon. The following morning First Vice-President M. P. Flanagan of the International Union, and W. L. Johnson of the local union called upon the W. L. Douglas Shoe Company and after a conference with Treasurer H. L. Tinkham, it was announced that the union desired, on behalf of all its members, to join in the application to the State Board of Arbitration for a decision on the following:

"A difference of opinion as to a fair day's wages and how many hours shall constitute a day's work for the Stationary Firemen."

Thus the matter was definitely settled in favor of the arbitration plan.

LABOR NEWS 96

Notice to Labor Unions.

Secretaries of labor organizations which take action upon the Brockton Central Labor Union's request that a State mass meeting of labor men be called and that the legislative recess committee be ignored by organized labor, are requested to inform the Labor Editor of the BOSTON AMERICAN and to send him copies of all resolutions adopted in relation to this matter.

The Boston Central Labor Union has called a special meeting for to-morrow, at which matters of the most urgent importance are to be acted upon. Every delegate who can possibly attend is asked to be present.

The meeting will be held in the afternoon, in Wells Memorial Hall.

BOILERMAKERS PLEASED.

General satisfaction is expressed by the members of the Boilermakers' unions, Lodges 250 and 431, and of Helpers' Union, Lodge No. 210, at the 7½ per cent. increase granted by the employers, in response to the demand of the men for a 10 per cent. increase.

In the agreement signed by the manufacturers and representatives of the men, the agreement of May 14, 1903, is continued in full effect. The increase of pay will go into effect on May 1.

The Boston & Maine boilermakers will hold a conference Monday regarding the 1907 wage scale.

Conferences are also in progress regarding increase of pay between employers and Boilermakers' Lodge No. 9, which is not affiliated with the international union.

CAR MEN SEEK RAISE.

International Carworkers' Union of Readville report progress in the negotiations under way regarding the demand for a 15 per cent. increase of wages. The union is acting in concert with the members of other allied crafts in the movement, and the decision of the railroad officials will affect all the workers of the system. The report of the auditing committee, just made, shows that the union is stronger than ever at the present time, both numerically and financially.

LABOR NOTES.

D. D. Addison will speak on "Ambition" at the educational hour of the meeting of the Boston Newsboys' Union, No. 30 Hanover street, to-morrow afternoon.

Matthew Comerford of St. Paul, international president of the Hoisting and Portable Engineers' Union, will be in Boston next Monday. An excessive demand for union engineers is reported by the officers of the Boston union.

Elevator Constructors' Union No. 4 and Allston Lodge No. 107, Carworkers, who have condemned President Roosevelt's attack on Moyer and Haywood, have voted to parade in the demonstration of protest on Sunday, May 5.

SUITS AGAINST 3 BIG CONCERNS

CONCORD, N. H., April 27.—United States Marshal E. P. Nute has served papers in cases against three of the largest corporations of the State for recovering for the negligence in their management as follows:

James Arseneau, vs. Berlin Street Railway Company in $10,000 for the death of a child, Edward J. Cummings vs. Grand Trunk Railway Company, $10,000, for the death of Meride J. Gauthier, at Gorham, and Arthur Robin vs. International Paper Company, $40,000 for personal injuries sustained in a paper mill.

BATS BASEBALL; KILLS BROTHER

PORTSMOUTH, N. H., April 27.—From a fractured skull, sustained from a ball batted by his fourteen-year-old brother, Daniel Trefether, ten-year-old son of Ernest Trefether, an old-time ball player, died last night. The boys were playing in the school yard yesterday afternoon and John Trefether hit a ball just as the younger boy ran in front of him. The ball struck Daniel back of the ear and he was unconscious most of the time until his death.

Boston Must Be Clean

Will YOU lend your aid to prevent disease and promote the city's health?

CLEAN up your cellars, back yards, alley ways, houses and stores.

Neighboring cities are now suffering with epidemics of smallpox and other contagious diseases, many of which have their beginning in the danger which lurks in the accumulation of debris and dirt in back yards, cellars and vacant lots.

The Sanitary Department of the City of Boston will remove all such refuse and everyone is requested to place it in the street opposite their premises between the hours of sunrise and 2 p. m. of the following days:

No Imitation of Fels-Naptha soap will do what the original does.

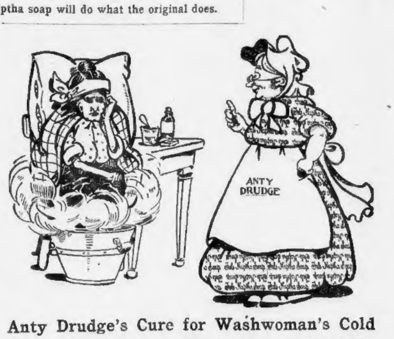
The washerwoman's cold

Don't you know what it is? Did you ever have it?

This time of year washerwoman's cold is epidemic among women, who wash in the old-fashioned way.

Bending over steaming suds opens the pores. Rubbing on the washboard starts perspiration. And sitting in a draft to cool off closes pores and checks perspiration—suddenly.

Next day the washwoman's cold.



Anty Drudge's Cure for Washwoman's Cold

Mrs. Hausfrau—"My arms were so tired, I sat on the porch for a few moments to cool off before putting the wash on the line, and here I am with a cold."

Anty Drudge—"It's you own fault. Why don't you wash the Fels-Naptha way? Here you've got to soak your feet an hour in mustard water, and your back's broken, when if you'd soaped your wash with Fels-Naptha, and set it to soak in cold water for half an hour, you'd have been spared the work as well as the cold.

With Fels-Naptha soap there is no boiling nor scalding. No hard rubbing on the washboard. In half the time and with quarter the labor, the clothes are on the line—cleaner, whiter and sweeter than they ever were before. But cold or luke warm water should be used.

You will know the genuine Fels-Naptha by the red and green wrapper.

WHOLE WORLD OF SPORTS COVERED FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS CORPS OF EXPERTS

ATHLETICS CLOSE SERIES HERE TO-DAY

BATTING ORDER.

| ATHLETICS. | BOSTON. |

| Nicholls, 3b. | Criger, c. |
| Plank, p. | Glaze, p. |

Umpire, Evans.

It's farewell to the Athletics on the Back Bay links this afternoon and it will be well into the Summer season before they tramp the local pasture again.

There is also an important matter to settle at hand, as the visitors have won three in a line, and the result determines whether the Quakers are to sweep the boards or leave a little consolation in the shape of one victory. It's a small morsel, one out of four, though it hasn't arrived yet, but the big round-up of the fans will make things lively to bring it about.

When you consider that only a total of fourteen runs have been made in the three games played between the teams some idea of the meaning of the tallys can be appreciated. The Athletics hold the large end of the run getting up to date, but figuring on the way the scores have been decreasing as the series advanced the system is in favor of the home crowd for to-day.

Why there is not more batting brought out by the home team is still a mystery to the fans. A mild bombardment as a surprise to-day might relieve some of the anxiety.

It will probably be up to Plank or Vickers for the Quakers this afternoon to take the slab job, and unless the former makes the stickers walk the board at short notice his reputation will be marred.

Ralph Glaze is likely to get a chance to shine by stepping into the box, and while his old college chums are battling with the Crimson over on Soldiers' Field will endeavor to break up the string of defeats which has pursued the Pilgrims.

It was a close squeeze yesterday when the game was lost 1 to 0, with the teams drawing ciphers till the seventh, when Buster left a third strike go through his legs. That runner eventually scored the run which did the job.

NOTES OF THE GAME.

It was pretty chilly for the first ladies' day and many preferred waiting for more favorable weather.

* * *

Bob Unglaub is now captain in the field and will call the turn on the plays.

* * *

Dygert is a featherweight twirler, but he has a wing that is worth its weight in money.

* * *

It was hitting them down the wrong alley when little Hartsell was located in left. He was caging the ball all over the garden.

* * *

There was nothing off color in Pruitt's pitching. It was not his fault that the game was lost.

* * *

And Wagner got the only hit for his team. His work all round is well liked.

* * *

Wagner was held on the first bag on Buster's long fly to the left corner when it was a grand chance to move up a notch.

* * *

Denny Sullivan let one get by him on Cross's crack to centre, but it was a nasty bounding shot.

* * *

That was a nifty play when Pruitt jumped over to first and took Ferris' throw of a ball Hobe got back of first.

* * *

Rube Waddell won't appear wearing the spangles on the present trip of the Athletics. His Rubblets has been breaking the discipline rules according to the Mack code and Connie has suspended him for thirty days.

* * *

Wagner took a chance and got a double on his hit to right which some players would have been satisfied with a single base.

* * *

Pruitt had a wide curve on tap which seemed to bother the batters, judging by the way they swung on it.

* * *

Davis tried the squeeze play with Nichols at the bat, but the new third baseman fanned as Harry ran into the plate to be touched out by Buster.

TO CHALLENGE ENGLISH ATHLETES

NEW HAVEN, April 27.—It was announced by Captain J. W. Marshall of the Yale track team that a joint challenge for an international track meet on American soil will be signed by Yale and Harvard to-day in New York and sent to England. S. Sumner of Yale and J. Rowe of Harvard, managers of their college track teams, will draw up and forward the challenge to Oxford and Cambridge, expecting to receive a reply in about two weeks.

From advices received from abroad the representatives of the two American universities are pretty sure that the challenge will be welcomed in England. Both Yale and Harvard athletes are now planning their training to include work for the big track event. Mr. Marshall said that it would be his idea to have the contest held at the Harvard Stadium on July 4 if possible. As to finances, he said the event would pay for itself without much doubt, but in case of a failure to come out even the graduates could be counted on for contributions.

"Yale is whipping her track team into shape," said Captain Marshall, "but I can tell little as to the developments of the individuals until after the Spring university games. Barring possible accidents, we should do well in the intercollegiates and the international races if they are arranged."

WALCOTT LOST ON MAT.

LEWISTON, Me., April 27.—In a sensational wrestling exhibition in this city last night, Wilfred Barrett of Lewiston defeated Joe Walcott, the "Black Demon" of Boston, in straight falls. Barrett won the first fall with scissors and body hold in eighteen minutes and twenty seconds and the second fall with a scissors and half-Nelson in ten minutes.

Walcott suffered a severe attack of stomach sickness at the close of the first bout and a long wait followed before he was able to finish the exhibition.

BOSTON AUTO DEALERS IN MAY DAY RUN WEDNESDAY

BY J. C. KERRISON.

The members of the Boston Automobile Dealers' Association will be the guests of Harry K. Mansfield at Ferncroft on Wednesday afternoon next. President MacAlman of the association has accepted the invitation of Mr. Mansfield and called a May Day run of the association. The members will leave Copley square at 2 o'clock next Wednesday afternoon and in force move upon the famous hostelry that crowns the hill lying between Danvers and Middleton. A thoroughly good time is assured and the pleasant experiences of previous years will surely be duplicated.

* * *

As a result of his temporary sojourn on the Pacific coast in search of rest and recreation, Benjamin Briscoe reports extraordinary prosperity in California following the catastrophe of last Spring. This is particularly noticeable, he observed, in the growing number of automobiles to be seen on the ideal roads around Los Angeles.

Besides the well-known beauties of California scenery, the weather is such that automobiling is excellent the year round especially in Southern California—a combination which has a special appeal to motoring enthusiasts. Never before, in fact, have so many machines been licensed on the Pacific coast as during the past several months, the Maxwell-Briscoe factories, as an instance, having been greatly taxed to supply the increasing demand. A favorite long distance run is between San Francisco and Los Angeles, many parties negotiating the run daily.

Mr. Briscoe, among several manufacturers, whose cars have earned popularity on the coast, is enthusiastic over business conditions in Los Angeles and San Francisco.

In reference to the auxiliary gasolene tank, a Winton feature, "Whys and Wherefores of the Automobile," a notable text book on motor cars, says: "Where no auxiliary tank is used, should the carburetor become empty, the motor must be cranked a sufficient number of times for the compressed air to force gasoline all the way from the main tank to the carburetor. Or, it is necessary to inject into the carburetor by hand sufficient gasoline to rotate the motor until such time as the gasoline flows to the carburetor from the main tank, under pressure from the air pump.

"To obviate these difficulties, preferred practice makes use of an auxiliary gasoline tank. This has a shut-off valve, so that gasoline once reaching the auxiliary tank cannot flow back into the main tank. To avoid overflow, the auxiliary tank has a float, which automatically stops the inflow of gasoline when the tank is nearly full. A further advantage is that upon entering the auxiliary tank gasoline passes through a strainer and is always ready for use in the carburetor, insuring against the presence of foreign substances, which might prove injurious. By means of a petcock on the auxiliary tank, the user may at any time draw off gasoline for cleaning purposes without disturbing either the main tank or the carburetor."

Jefferson De Mont Thompson, chairman of the racing board of the American Automobile Association, has almost completely recovered from the illness that has kept him away from his office for some time. He said yesterday that he hoped to be out again in a few days, and that he would probably call a meeting of the racing board within the next ten days to discuss rules for the 1907 Vanderbilt cup race.

JOE BOWKER COMING HERE

CHICAGO, April 27.—Joe Bowker is coming to this country. Battling Nelson today received a telegram from Nolan informing him that Bowker has started from England for America and that when he reaches Chicago that Bat should accompany him West.

Nelson is contemptuous over the news that Summers is ready to fight him and wager a big sum on the side.

"If Summers is sincere in his declaration that he wants to fight me for a side bet of $10,000 I will sign at once," said the Dane.

WANTS GRIM IN THE GAME

Sporting Editor, BOSTON AMERICAN:

The Pilgrims are not doing as well as predicted from their Southern training camp, and the fans want more victories. Wouldn't it be a good plan to put Parent at shortstop and Grimshaw in right field. What we need are batters. Wagner hasn't made good with the stick, and certainly Grim did last year. It's too bad to keep a .300 batter on the bench.

A WELL-WISHER OF PILGRIMS.

SOL IS AFTER SCALPS AGAIN

Sol Sabotka, the genial soda dispenser of Dewey square, who is known not only for his success in fixing heads the "morning after," but for his great prowess on the bowling alleys, is on the warpath again. Sol has heard that Marrio Boggiano, the fruit dealer, and Jack Connolly, the "iron man," are not satisfied with the recent beatings they got at the tenpin game at his hands, but want a chance to redeem their lost prestige in bowlingdom. Sol says that he will meet these gentlemen, one at a time, for fun or marbles, on any alleys they may select. Sol is the champion bowler of the Druggists' League, and is willing to meet any other roller in the city, providing the above-named gentlemen fail to accept his challenge.

BROWN SEVERS ALL TIES WITH DARTMOUTH

Special to the Boston American.

PROVIDENCE, April, 27.—As the result of a dispute at the baseball game here last Wednesday, when the Dartmouth nine withdrew from the field, the Brown University Athletic Association has decided to sever all athletic relations with the Hanover university. President W. A. Spinney, Jr., in a letter to the president of the Dartmouth association, said:

"The Board of Directors of the Brown University Athletic Association, at a meeting this afternoon, unanimously voted to sever all athletic relations with Dartmouth College.

"In the judgment of the board, the withdrawal of Dartmouth in Wednesday's game is simply one of a long series of incidents which render such action necessary and advisable in the interest of college sport."

PHILADELPHIA, April 27.—Manager Dovey's Boston Nationals, fresh from a successful series in Brooklyn, where they won two games and tied a thirteen-inning contest, are here for their game with the Quakers this afternoon. After this contest the Doves will go to New York for a series of three games.

"Little Cy" Young will most likely pitch for the visitors to-day, while Pittinger may face his former team-mates in behalf of the locals. The Doves are confident that they will beat the Quakers, and then they will drop over to Gotham, where they hope to score revenge for the four games they lost to the Giants in the Hub.

BATES' FINE WORK WITH STICK BRINGS VICTORY TO DOVES

Special to the Boston American.

BROOKLYN, April 27.—Boston won the final game here with the Dodgers, 4 to 2.

The locals were two runs to the good, up to the seventh inning, when the Doves lit upon Pitcher Rucker, and when the smoke cleared away were two runs in the lead.

To Johnny Bates Boston chiefly owes her victory, as it was his home-run wallop, with one down and Flaherty on second, that tied the score. Bates's record for the day was a single, double, triple and a home run, a total of ten bases.

After Bates's homer, Tenney got passed and Beaumont singled. Both worked Rucker for a double steal. Howard's drive to left scored both runners. There was no more scoring.

In Brooklyn's half it started to rain, and the Dodgers tried their hardest to have the game called but Emslie refused to do so, which would have made the score revert back to the sixth inning, and given them a victory.

Notes of the Harness Horses

It is good news that the Brockton Fair officials have decided to again give the two and three-year-old races at the coming Fall festival. All youngsters are eligible to these events not having records of 2:36 or better. The purses are for $500 each, on the subscription scale of entrance. With these the association has, too, opened a couple of stake races—a 2:24 class trot and a 2:20 class pace—with purses of $1,000 each. First payments are due May 6. An innovation that will be pleasing to the drivers is the offering of $10 in gold to the first five drivers winning positions in the races at the fair.

E. J. Tranter is eagerly after that $2,500 match race proposed by Trainer Charley Thompson with the three-year-old stallion Rhythmic Bell, 2:21¾, to be decided next October. It is thought Tranter will name a colt bought last Fall by an Eastern trainer, of which big stories were told.

Alta McDonald is so much improved in health that he will superintend the training of a stable of campaigners, and when the racing season opens expects to be able to do the honors in the sulky.

Tommy Berry, who trained for the West Medford horseman, Sam Hastings, for several years, and later for J. F. Fitzgerald, marking the pacers Miss Ormond, 2:10¾, and Sagwa, 2:11, has a string of youngsters at the Woonsocket, R. I., track.

The famous brood mare Paronella, dam of Country J., 2:10½; Kentucky Todd, 2:14¾; Nella Jay, 2:14¼, and Judge Parker, 2:27¼, is dead. As she was only fifteen years old, her loss to the breeding world is untold. She was the only mare to produce two winners of the classic, the Kentucky Futurity.

The latest addition to the list of trainers at Readville track is Ira Goodridge, of Lyme, Ct., who brought along with him the stallion Lecco, 2:09¾; the pacing filly Easter Direct, trial last year of 2:03¾, and a filly by Lecco. Easter Direct will be trained for campaigning, and the speed of the filly will be developed.

Bingen Bird, by Bingen, 2:06¼, out of a mare by Jay Bird, has been sold by the estate of L. S. Leavitt of Boston to C. W. Sylvester, Bowdoinham, Me. He is three years old and promising.

Ira Woodbury will have out a string of horses, the property of M. H. Smith of Hartford, but who has a stock farm in Belfast, Me. He will condition them over the Lewiston, Me., track. Others at the same course are Robert Waite and Frank Hayden, the latter having the best lot of trotters and pacers he has had since locating in that section.

When a hoppled pacer wins a good race we never think of praising the horse. Our admiration goes to the man who risked his life by climbing in behind an animal whose legs were tied together so tightly that only the best brand of good luck prevented an accident.

George W. Rice of Springfield is showing a letter from "Long Shot" Cox, dated February 25, in which the latter expresses a desire to match Nervolo, 2:04¼, against Amos R., 2:09½, for $1,000 to $5,000 a side. Rice is more than anxious that Cox cover the $1,000 he has deposited with the Springfield Republican to make the race, as he thinks that Amos R. has the better of the argument at quarter-mile heats, over any track.

Charley Sweet, formerly a pupil of Trainer Henry Titer of Readville, has been engaged by Fred Duncanson, Fairville, N. B., to handle a stable of horses the coming season. Among the number is Etta Mac, 2:21, and a green one called Laura Merrill, that is reported warm goods when in condition.

Trainer Dick Lawrence has located at Combination Park for the season. He had planned to go to the Dover, N. H., track as in past years, but at the final minute changed his mind. He has added to his string a green pacer.

Jimmie McGregor, who formerly trained at the local tracks, has a stable of promising youngsters at the Millville, R. I., track.

In a letter to the Hall family, Pat Shank stated that the trotting gelding Kim, 2:15¾, should turn Readville the coming Summer in 2:06, if handled by any other than a "dub" trainer. "Long Shot" Cox says that he timed him in a race in 2:08¼, while Wilbur Duntley claims he saw him go to the quarter in a race in 30 seconds with his head turned half-way to his saddle. Perhaps Trainer Bob Lundy hasn't his season's work cut out for him!"

The Boston Gentlemen's Driving Club have decided to open the clubhouse at Readville track May 1. Invitations are being mailed to the prominent automobile followers to accept the hospitality of the clubhouse during their race meeting Memorial Day at Readville.

J. R. KEENE'S DAUGHTER TO SEEK DIVORCE

Financier Pleads in Vain for Son-in-Law Taylor, Who Was Once His Broker.

COUPLE ARE LIVING APART

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Through an application for a commission to take testimony of witnesses outside this State the fact became public yesterday that Mrs. Talbot J. Taylor, daughter of James R. Keene, had begun a suit for divorce against her husband, who was for some years prominent in Wall street as her father's broker. Mrs. Taylor's lawyer, Samuel Untermeyer, had the motion placed on the calendar of the Supreme Court before Judge O'Gorman, but made no argument. The fact that Mr. and Mrs. Taylor were living apart was generally known to their acquaintances.

Both have hitherto denied that a suit for divorce was either begun or contemplated. The first official record was Mr. Untermeyer's application for the examination of witnesses to confirm the charges that form the basis of Mrs. Taylor's suit.

Mr. Keene is known to have been opposed to the divorce suit. He has always shown fondness for his son-in-law and he was anxious to have his daughter overlook her grievances. He made many unsuccessful pleas for Mr. Taylor, and when the breach between husband and wife appears final, he has not changed his attitude.

The Taylors have been prominent socially ever since their marriage. They entertained elaborately at their home in Cedarhurst, L. I., and took parties of friends to their Adirondack camp on Saranac Lake.

GEN. STREETER QUITS B. & M.

CONCORD, N. H., April 27.—General Frank S. Streeter, who has been for many years general counsel for the Boston & Maine Railroad, severed the last tie binding him to his former client yesterday. At the meeting of the directors of the Concord & Montreal road, which is controlled by the Boston & Maine under a 999-year lease, Mr. Streeter resigned as clerk of the corporation. John M. Mitchell of this city was elected to succeed him.

MAYOR PLANTS COMMON ELM

To-day is Arbor Day, as established for this year by proclamation by Governor Curtis Guild, Jr. Divers official and private recognitions of the day are being held in the form of planting trees or flowering shrubs.

Boston's principal observance consisted of the planting of a tree in Boston Common by Mayor John F. Fitzgerald this afternoon. The tree is an offshoot from the Washington elm in Cambridge, which was presented to the city by Jackson Dawson of the Arnold Arboretum.

PIANO TRUST STILL FIGHTING US

Because we will not agree to keep up their high prices on pianos. At present the law seems to be with us. Nothing has yet been legally done to stop us selling at any old price. While we have a piano to dispose of we will enter it in our weekly sacrifice sale—Piano Trust or no Piano Trust.

In the past week many excellent piano values were given. Some of the finest upright pianos were sold at startlingly low prices. This week's lot is a trifle larger and better—on account of the nature of the sale, it being a storage salesroom sale, new and second hand pianos of the best makers are sacrificed—the prices are made subject to conditions which do not include any agents' commissions, sellers' commissions or any additional profit to the storage salesroom whatever. In sales like these some one's loss is your gain. The profit is all yours—the finest instruments of the world's best makers are in the sacrifice list.

GLEN ECHO LAKE

NO. STOUGHTON, 14 MILES OUT.

WATER FRONT LOTS, $200
ONE-ACRE FARMS, $100
CAMP LOTS, $50

LOTS, $5, $10 AND $15
$2 DOWN, $1 A WEEK

AT THIS picturesque lake of pure spring water, this gem of magnificent beauty dropped amid the hills and rugged crags of the Ponkapoag Indian Reservation, the Electric Road has the finest pine grove in the State; large hotel, dancing pavilion, bowling alley and bath houses. Across the lake, the sacred grove of the Indians, beside their great god Manitou, is the new village of Glen Echo, that sprang up like a mushroom and is growing like a Western mining town. Stores will be built this season, and probably fifty more cottages. Over $20,000 worth of land sold to hundreds of people.

I now have 200 acres of Ponkapoag Indian Reservation. The last purchase of fifty acres is perhaps the most picturesque region in the State, where wild nature has been untouched by the hand of man; an ideal spot for camping, in the primeval wilderness, in the sheltering shade of the forest glades. Here are high hills and deep vales, shady pools, rippling brooks, roaring waterfalls and ice-cold springs—the medicine springs of the Indians—issuing from the base of the great bluff in which stands the mighty god Jouskeha. The face of the divine one is chiseled by the hand of time in the immortal granite cliff, and above, on the very summit, stands the massive altar of the Red Man, weighing thousands of tons, dropped there 25,000 years ago in the glacial epoch. From this great boulder, in old times, the signal fires of the Indians flashed the call to arms to fight the Puritan marauders.

Twenty-five dollars bonus to those who build. Free excursion every Sunday at 12. BARTLETT, 89 Court st.

The Poetic Burglar and the Canary

The Foolish Burglar Represents Visionaries. The Unhappy Canary Represents Us Humans

A burglar stole from Mr. Beini a pair of shoes and a razor. It was a sentimental burglar, and besides stealing the shoes and the razor he allowed Mr. Beini's canary bird to fly out of its cage into the street. He left for Mr. Beini poetry and a postscript as follows:

"World-weary as I passed along,
From yonder casement came a sound,
A soft, persuasive, mellow thrill,
All listening hearts with joy to fill.

"With sweet appeal the captive bird
Told of its woes, and as I heard
I felt that I the one must be
To set the tiny prisoner free.

"P. S.—The man who keeps a bird in a cage deserves to lose more than his boots and his razor."

Mr. Beini mourns, the burglar feels proud of his brilliant idea and kind heart.

What about the canary, turned out into the world to shift for itself?

The poor bird probably trembled with delight as the cage was opened. It spread its wings and flew gratefully from prison, from Mr. Beini's fourth floor room, to the nearest roof gutter.

What then?

For a moment the canary probably said to itself, "The world is mine. Slavery is a thing of the past. Happiness for me now, I'll catch my own worms, no more humiliating bird seed, no more shameful cuttlefish bone for me to rub my beak on. I'll rub my beak against the eternal snow-clad rock. I'll drag the shivering worm from its lair, and slay the beetle on the wing."

The burglar had a kind thought, the little yellow canary a wild moment of bliss, of rebellion against fate, of grand enthusiasm.

What then?

Why then the canary flew down into a back yard, and a little brown sparrow that knew a thousand times more than he did about real life tried to pick his eyes out. He flew up on to a back fence, and a monstrous cat with blazing eyes crept toward him.

The rain wet his little yellow feathers, chilled his little pink feet.

He twittered for sympathy, and got none. Before many hours had passed, that poor, wretched canary has returned to the great cosmic egg from which he was originally hatched into finite time and space.

Just before the end came he mourned for his little porcelain bathtub. He longed for the cuttlefish bone, and wondered why he ever wanted to rub his beak on the backbone of the Rockies. He wished he could get once more into that little porcelain bathtub, swing on his little swing, even with the golden bars around it. But the burglar had freed him, he couldn't get back and he paid the penalty OF PREMATURE, UNTIMELY FREEDOM.

It is no pleasure to interfere with dreamers, or spoil their illusions.

But, readers, this burglar is like many of the visionaries that would end SUDDENLY AND WITHOUT PREPARATION the troubles and trials of humanity.

And the fate of that canary bird is very much the same as would be the fate of a great majority of human beings, if all the things that they foolishly wish for, and that the visionaries try to give them, could be realized at once.

All of us so-called civilized human beings are more or less like tame canary birds imprisoned in our industrial cage. Every day we must work, to-night we cease and to-morrow we work again. As children we work in school, as men we work on until the grave receives us. Our lives are dull. Thousands of good men have thought and planned ways of setting us free, JUST AS THE BURGLAR FREED THE CANARY.

Fortunately, the Divine wisdom that has put us, glued by gravitation, in this little cage we call the earth has laid plans with a wisdom that nothing can thwart. All the scheming of the dreamers comes to nothing. Men must LEARN before they can be free.

That canary bird perhaps could have been taught to take care of himself. He might have been allowed to hop as far as the door of the flat, and then back again. He might have stood for half an hour on the window-sill each day to learn what to DO, and how sparrows fight.

It is probable, of course, that HE NEVER could have learned how to live outside of a cage. Still, he might have done it, if things had been worked very carefully. Certainly, his grandchildren or great-great-grandchildren five hundred times removed could have been taught to go to the mountains and live there, self-sufficient and self-protecting.

So it is with men. They are like the canary. They can only live as they have been used to living. Give all the men in the United States enough money to live on, AND YOU WOULD HAVE A NATION OF RIOTOUS, DISSIPATED IDLERS. Give every individual the thing he is longing for, AND YOU WOULD SPOIL THE THING HE IS GOOD FOR.

Free men from the stern necessity which is their cage, and you would ruin them, and civilization would have to begin all over again.

We must learn SLOWLY, a little at a time, just as the burglar's unhappy canary should have learned.

We took our first little step from absolute slavery of the body to serfdom. And the serf for a while longed for the old slavery. Then, from serfdom men progressed to what they were pleased to call freedom. It was simply a form of industrial slavery.

Man is no longer owned, body and soul, like the slave. Man is no longer tied to the soil, and owned with it like the serf, but his time is not his own. And he is tied TO THE MACHINE, to the typewriter, or the engine, or the loom, or the steel pen, or the counter, just as thoroughly as the serfs were tied to the soil. And if he leaves that machine he will perish.

We have only BEGUN the work of self-government. We are only practising on the doorstep of freedom, as the canary bird should have practised on the window-sill, before starting out in earnest. We think we govern ourselves, BUT WE DON'T. Instead of military kings to govern us, we have money kings. Instead of a very small class ruling, we have a somewhat bigger class.

And, probably, the inscrutable wisdom that regulates and controls us knows what is best. Probably we poor little human canary birds are hopping and fluttering toward freedom about as fast as we can afford to go. And probably we are extremely lucky that no one of the kind visionaries, religious, socialistic, philanthropic or revolutionary, has ever been able to do for us what the burglar did for the canary, AND TURN US OUT INTO THE WIDE WORLD OF ACTUAL FREEDOM BEFORE WE WERE READY FOR IT.

Canaries and men are alike in this: THEY MUST KNOW HOW TO USE FREEDOM BEFORE THEY CAN GET IT. Probably we shall get it, AS SOON AS WE KNOW HOW TO USE IT.

Let the sad fate of the canary bird comfort you, if you beat your wings against the cage occasionally and rebel at the little allowance of bird seed which you get day by day.

The man who writes the editorials for the evening editions of the BOSTON AMERICAN also writes the full-page editorials that appear every week in the SUNDAY AMERICAN. Get the AMERICAN every Sunday, beginning to-morrow, and FORM THE THINKING HABIT.

Bill

By James J. Montague

BILL says he ain't no hero, an' he won't be, furthermore,
An' bein' advertised as one has got him good an' sore.
He says of all the foolish things he's sorry that he did,
The foolishest he recollects was savin' that there kid.
The kid was just the reg'lar kind, an' not much good, at that,
An' there was six just like it in its mother's one-room flat.
This bein' made a hero is a thing he can't stand for:
A kid is just a kid, he says; there's always plenty more.

HE sees the youngster playin' on the trolley track one day,
Kid like, not knowin' that the cars had got the right of way.
It wasn't dressed up fancy an' its face was mostly dirt,
But if it stayed there on the track, it likely might been hurt,
Espeshly as the trolley trucks is almost on its back,
When Bill sees what is goin' on an' yanks it off the track.
He got mussed up hisself a bit, but wasn't hurt so much
But what he'll get around all right next Winter—with a crutch.

BILL thought its mother might be sore, because she didn't need
So many kids to keep in clo'es an' work all day to feed;
But, 'stid o' that, he's just been kissed an' cried about an' praised;
She couldn't do no more if Bill had got her wages raised.
Bill says she must of loved that kid just like the mothers do
That owns them pretty ones you see up on the avenue.
A washerwoman, so Bill says, ain't like a stylish dame,
But when it comes to babies they seems pretty much the same.

HOME. RECENTLY.

MEIN LIEBER LOOEY: Ve haf receifed your letter from Erie, Pa., und ve vas glat to know dot your healt' is treating you pleasantly.

I notice, Looey, in some of your last letters someding vich makes me get an uneasiness abould you, yet.

In your letter from Glens Falls, N. Y., you tell us dot you haf taken up der study of painting; in your letter from Scranton, Pa., you tell us dot you haf choined a school of correspondence for der study of boxing; in your letter from South Bend, Ind., you say dot you vas taking a flying course in medicine, und in your letter from Gooseport, Ia., you mention it dot you vas studying between towns to be a actor.

Dis suspicions me, Looey, dot you vas in a fair vay to become a Chack of all Trades, und I vish to varn you right now dot only vun man in dis vorld efer dit dot und got avay mit it, und dot vas Emperor Villum of Chermany.

Dis proofs to us, Looey, der truth of dot olt proverb vich says dot a King in der hand vas vorth four in der discards.

I vould like to mention to you in dis letter, Looey, some of Villum's history, yust to show der energy vich confronts him.

As you know, Looey, Emperor Villum is relationed py uncleship to King Edvard, der seven spot.

Bright und early in der Monday morning Emperor Villum starts der veek py writing a bunch of poeticals, und for a leedle vile it looked like somevun vould read it und declare var on Chermany, but better chudgment prevailed, und Villum svapped his rhyming tictionary for a piano, und dot efening he wrote a comical opera.

On der next Tuesday morning Villum vent ould und inwentioned a new golf ball.

Der idea of der new golf ball is dot ven you hit it mit der brassy for der sefen-hole und it foozoozles und smashes vun of der spectators at der nine-hole near der apex between der nose und der face, der ball at vunce telescopes und becomes an alarm clock vich rings for der ambulance.

Villum has receifed a large number of praise for dis inwention, vich makes it so pleasant for a spectator to vatch der game mitouid hafing to valk to der hospital after he is vounded as hidderto.

On der following Vednesday, yust abould der time dot 10 o'clock became loose on der striker, Villum hat a sham battle between der Schlossweinerhoffbrau Diwision of der Ninth Army Corps und der Mackerelpretzel Brigade, unter Cheneral Bierbauer.

Both sides vun because needer of dem dared to lose ven der Emperor vas der referee, und dot efening Villum vent down to Bonn und wrote a college song vich used up abould a pint of ragtime in der chorus.

On T'ursday somebody opened a roller rink und Villum learned to use roller skates mitouid sittin' down ven he least eggspected it.

Der scene in der rink is vun vich sees description coming und runs around der corner.

So Villum vent home, und on Friday he inwentioned a torpedo destroyer; on Saturday he wrote annuder opera und hat annuder sham battle before supper.

You see it, Looey, dot a King may be a Chack of all Trades because nobody has got der nerve to tell him dot he doan'd make goot.

But for you, Looey, I vould suchchest dot you stick to drummering until a rich relative dies und you get a chob from a lawyer to contest der vill.

Yours, mit luff,

D. DINKELSPIEL,

Asks Labor to Ignore the Recess Committee

THE Brockton Central Labor Union is sending to other central bodies throughout the State a copy of its resolutions, recently adopted, asking for a conference of labor organizations to discuss the Legislature vote-dodging policy, and suggesting that labor repudiate the recess committee. The resolutions follow:

Whereas, the Brockton Central Labor Union and other unions in Massachusetts have denounced the scheme of a legislative recess committee on labor measures and pledged themselves to use every effort in their election districts to defeat those who would not aid us in securing decisive consideration by the present Legislature, as voted by your State convention in Lawrence; now, therefore, be it resolved:

That we request the Executive Committee of the State Branch, A. F. of L., to call into conference delegates from all Central Labor Unions and all local unions and all other labor organizations in Massachusetts, as we did on the overtime bill, to consider what attitude organized labor shall assume toward the said recess committee and legislators responsible for it, and to advance the work of organizing in election districts to protect the interests of the work producers politically, and, pending the action by such a conference and subject to it, we hold that,

Inasmuch as organized labor was foremost and unanimous in its declaration that it did not want a recess committee, and would politically oppose those who favored it, a consistent, dignified and upper-hand attitude for labor to assume would be to repudiate the recess committee and its supporters, and refuse to attend its sessions or to give it any countenance whatever.

It was voted to send a copy of these resolutions to other central bodies in Massachusetts, and to invite action by other unions who might in any way read a copy of these resolutions.

(Notice—Secretaries of labor organizations which take action in this matter are requested to send to the Labor Editor of this newspaper copies of all resolutions adopted.—Editor BOSTON AMERICAN.)
